Business Men Planning Helpful Improvements

Down Town Business Men's Association Formally Organized With Object of Improving Conditions Without "Knocking" Anyone or Anything—Adequate Parking Place Probable—Correct Street Signs, Better Street Parking System and Other Matters Under Consideration.

If the board of public works cooperates, as it has in fitting up other parking places, there will be an adequate parking place down town very soon. This will be one of the first fruits of the newly organized Down Town Business Men's Association, which at its meeting Wednesday evening voted to accept the offer of Abram Handler to loan a large lot on Ann street, near Mill street, for the purpose. The board of public works will be asked to do the necessary grading and paving, as was done on the three other parking grounds now in use, and a committee composed of E. Coykendall, H. H. Flemming, John D. Schoonmaker, James F. Dwyer and Dr. A. A. Stern was named to present the matter to the city authorities.

The new association formally organized by electing Dr. Sam Stern, president and C. F. Heiselman, secretary and treasurer, with a board of directors composed of Louis Kaplan, Louis Stock, W. C. Kingman, I. Goldman, Jacob Greenwald, Sam Mann, James F. Dwyer, Dr. Sam Stern and C. F. Heiselman.

Improvement Is Only Object.

President Stern in assuming office stated that the object of the association was to make a better down town section and a better Kingston, without "knocking" anyone or anything, and especially to bring about conditions that will result in more shopping being done down town, especially by those who now go out of the city to shop.

Dues to the association for the remainder of the calendar year are to be $10, with plural memberships permitted. Annual dues are to be fixed in December and $25 was the amount suggested by the committee.

Proper Signs at Bridge.

The directors will take up the matter of proper signs at the Rondout Creek Bridge, the plan being to have really truthful and informative signs indicating that Wurts street leads uptown and Abeel street down town and that both uptown and down town are parts of Kingston. Similar signs will be placed at other entrances to the city where required.

An advertising committee will arrange to run at least once a week an advertisement carrying the slogan: "Shop down town where your money buys the most." Members of the association will be expected to advertise goods and prices under this general "booster" ad.

Leave Streets for Customers.

A suggestion was made that if business men and their employes could be induced to park their own cars in the parking place instead of storing them all day in the streets there would be more room and greater convenience for potential customers of the stores who come in from other places or other parts of the city.

In this connection the bus committee, Henry Fagher, Mr. Mann and Mr. Murphy, proposes to investigate bus conditions and see that the busses comply with the terms of their franchises in regard to making the proper stops at the Strand terminal and that this is made possible by keeping the space they require in front of the terminal free from parked cars. At present waiting passengers often have to go up or down the street or across the street to board a bus because there is no place for it to stop where it should. The matter of bus drivers neglecting to take parcels from the terminal will also be gone into.

C. of C. Offers to Help.

A message of good will and an offer of service from President Reben and Secretary Coe of the Chamber of Commerce was brought by Benjamin Suskind and was received with thanks and the expression of a belief that assistance would doubtless be needed and would be thankfully received.

Delay in Theatre Work Explained.

Mr Miller of the Orpheum Theatre stated that owing to the contractor being unable to begin work until so late in the season that work would not be completed until January, the rebuilding of the theatre had been postponed until next spring, but it would be done at that time. Plans are complete, the financing arranged for and "it is only a matter of doing the work without losing the best part of the year's business. Mr. Miller took occasion to deny vigorously street rumors that the theatre had been condemned by the fire department. He said the theatre had not had any trouble with any of the local authorities but had been criticised by the State Labor Department, which now has jurisdiction over theatres in cities that have no building code, but that this criticism was on technicalities.

Mayor Wants Information.

Mayor Block, called on for a speech, said he had nothing to say; he had merely called in to hear the discussion and learn what the business men wanted in order that he might help them if possible.

Other Matters Discussed.

There was discussion of various suggested improvements such as better store fronts, better display of goods, more advertising, better lighting of windows, the need for a department store and various other matters, taken part in by Jacob Greenwald, Harry Nathan, Samuel J. Kiber, I. Goldman, Max Jacobson, Mr. Miller, Mr. Aiken, Mr. Beeron, Mr. Fasher, Morris Nathan, and others and an adjournment for two weeks was taken.

More than 60 men were present, the attendance being larger than at the first meeting. A large number paid their dues and those who have not paid are expected to drop in and see Treasurer Heiselman at the First National Bank.

Man Who Killed Six Surrenders

"I'm Tired of Being Hunted," Says Man Who is Credited With Having Killed Six Men—Surrenders to Woman Sheriff.

Texarkana, Ark., Aug 19 (AP).—Carl "Kinnie" Wagner, 23, alleged slayer of six men, is in custody today after quietly surrendering himself yesterday to Sheriff Lillie Barber, woman executive of Miller county.

"I'm tired of being hunted," Wagner said. "I don't want to dodge people any more."

Posses had been searching for the notorious gunman since Tuesday as the result of his latest shooting escapade. On that day he is alleged to have fatally shot Sam and Will Carper and wounded Bob Carper on a farm near Texarkana.

The prisoner is wanted at Kingsport, Tenn., for slashing two officers and wounding a third in April, 1925. He had been sentenced to die in the electric chair for this act and was in jail pending an appeal from the sentence when he led other prisoners in a jail delivery and escaped.

In Mississippi, Wagner is wanted in connection with the deaths of two officers who attempted to prevent him from breaking out of a jail.

"I have never been arrested for stealing or been in jail on any other charge except killing," Wagner told Sheriff Barber.

Valentino on Way to Health

Famous Screen Star Appears to Have Passed Crisis Successfully—Doctors Say He Will Recover Barring Unforseen Developments.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Rudolph Valentino of the silver sheet appeared today to have passed the crisis of a dangerous illness that sent him to the Polyclinic Hospital Sunday for a double operation.

A special medicine, metephen, was at hand, however, for emergency use if local blood poisoning should spread. The metephen, a mercurial antiseptic developed by Dr. George W. Raiziss, professor of chemotherapy at the University of Pennsylvania, was sent from Philadelphia by special messenger last night.

The screen actor's doctors said last night that he probably would recover unless there were unforseen developments. Previously they had said local peritonitis or poisoning had followed his operation for appendicitis and gastric ulcers, and that he would die if it became general.

Death Toll from Airplane Wreck Mounts to Three

French Pilot of Plane Succumbs to Injuries—American Killed Was From Boston—Injured Americans Expected to Recover—Description of Catastrophe.

Folkestone, England, Aug. 19 (AP).—The British air ministry today began an investigation of the crash of a French cross-channel airplane at Aldington yesterday which caused the deaths of one American, one Italian and one Frenchman and the injury of twelve others in the plane. Seven of the injured passengers were Americans.

The accident was the most serious passenger airplane tragedy that England has ever experienced. It occurred when the plane collided with a barn while making a forced landing during a heavy fog.

American Came From Boston.

The American killed was Robert Blaney of Boston, Mass., who has been traveling in Europe since he was graduated from Harvard this year. Vigo Rizzi, the other man killed was prominently known as the manager of London's noted Ambassador Club. He had been on a short visit to Paris.

The French pilot De Lisle died this afternoon, bringing the total deaths of the accident to three.

Other Americans Will Recover.

The Americans injured in the crash were taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital where it was stated that unless unexpected complications set in, all would probably recover.

The passengers had a terrifying experience as the plane, careening toward the earth, struck a barn and several haystacks before it finally collapsed.

"Realized Something Was Wrong."

Victoria Varden, who is a daughter of the president of the Central Land Bank of Baltimore, said: "Just before the crash I looked out and it appeared as though the earth was spinning around below us. Then there was a tremendous bump and a series of other crashes. Following this there was a horrifying silence, seeming more ominous than if there had been screams. I knew nothing more until I was pulled out. During the flight over the channel I realised that something was wrong when the mechanic came out into the cockpit and seemed to be fixing something near the plane floor."

FRENCH FRANC STARTS UPWARD ONCE AGAIN

Paris, Aug. 19 (AP).—A new upward movement of the franc, which began with New York's favorable quotations on Tuesday, continued today until it carried the dollar down to 34.52, a drop of 2.19 francs in two days.

Paris has been following the lead of New York in this movement, although the favorable impression created by the government's activities in the direction of economies had something to do with the strength of French money. The recovery of the franc from its recent reaction after its sensational rise when Premier Poincaire took power has caused surprise in some quarters.

WALSH ACT ATTACKED BY OIL ATTORNEYS.

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP).—Attorneys for Albert B. Fall, Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair, yesterday attacked as unconstitutional the Walsh act, designed to speed up legal action in the government oil cases.

A brief filed in the court of appeals contended that the act attempts to strip the court of jurisdiction to hear special appeals in the Fall-Doheny-Sinclair conspiracy cases, and is an attempted invasion by congress of functions of the judiciary.

STANDARD OF NEW JERSEY ADVANCES KEROSENE PRICE

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey today advanced the price of kerosene one cent a gallon through its territory, making the new tank wagon price 17 cents a gallon.

Sinclair Refining Company also advanced kerosene one half cent a gallon in railroad tank cars at New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic Coast terminals to 10½ cents.

Whitney's Trainer Robbed.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP)—Fred Hopkins, one of the trainers in Harry Payne Whitney's racing stable, was held up by auto bandits while riding in his car on the outskirts of the city last night and was robbed of his watch and $260. They also took his car, which was later discovered abandoned. Hopkins's automobile registration card and other papers in their victim's pocketbook, the bandits returned with the remark: "Here, take this back; you may need them."

Italian Prince Killed.

Genzano, Italy, Aug. 19 (AP)—Prince Umberto Ruspoli today was shot and killed by one of two thieves he surprised in the garden of his villa here. The prince was a member of one of the oldest of Italian families and was a brother of the late Prince Enrico Ruspoli.

Friedman Gets Heavier Sentence

Circumstances Subsequent to Imposing of Original Sentence Impel Judge Fowler to Revoke it and Send Friedman to Dannemora.

Samuel Friedman, who was sentenced on August 13 in county court to the Elmira State Reformatory on his plea of guilty of grand larceny in having robbed the safe at the Max Levinson boarding house at Greenfield where he worked, has found that the law is far-reaching. He was again haled before Judge Fowler in county court Wednesday afternoon and the sentence imposed last week was revoked and a more severe sentence imposed.

At the opening of court District Attorney Traver stated that certain circumstances had been brought to his attention since the sentence on Friday, August 13, and he asked the court to set aside the sentence imposed at that time. The motion was granted and Judge Fowler stated that he had been informed of the circumstances and in consequence was revoking the Reformatory sentence only to impose a more severe one, that of an indeterminate sentence of from two to three years in the Clinton prison at Dannemora.

The reason for the more severe sentence was not made public but it is understood to be due to Friedman's conduct, and occurences which have transpired since the theft at the boarding house where he was working as a waiter.

Mrs. Friedman who entered a plea of guilty of receiving stolen goods was sentenced to Bedford Reformatory and the execution of sentence was suspended during good behavior. She had an eight months old child.

Waters Didn't Steal the Logs

County Judge Reverses Decision That Said He Did.

Some time ago F. A. Waters of this city was arrested on a warrant secured by Tracy M. Van Vliet, who charged that Waters had stolen some logs which had been left at the old Roosa mill at Eddyville to be sawed. Van Vliet claimed that Waters had removed the logs from the mill when he abandoned it and that he took the logs to his Kingston mill and that when he told Mr. Waters that the logs were his (Van Vliet's) property and not to move them Waters replied that they were his logs and he would take them. He told Van Vliet that the logs belonged to him and he was going to take them and if Van Vliet wanted to he could bring his lawyer and the sheriff and stop the men who were removing the logs.

Mr. Van Vliet did get both. He swore out a warrant for Waters's arrest and had him hailed before Judge Webber of the town of Ulster, and as a result Waters was fined $15.

An appeal was taken and came before Judge Fowler in county court Wednesday. A. J. Cook appeared for Mr. Waters and argued the appeal. He stated that Mr. Waters believed the logs were his, that according to Van Vliet they had been at the Roosa yard for near a year and they were similar to the Waters logs. Mr. Cook argued that they were taken in daylight while Mr. Van Vliet was present and that there therefore could have been no criminal intent or intention to steal them. It was a matter of difference of opinion and the matter was for the civil courts and not a criminal action.

After the arrest, however, Waters 'phoned Van Vliet and told him he would saw the logs as he desired and stated that the logs could be taken by Van Vliet. He admitted they were the property of Van Vliet. Van Vliet claims that prior to arrest Waters contended the logs were his property.

Judge Fowler after hearing argument reversed the judgment of Judge Webber's court.

Nicaragua Trying To Check Revolt

State Department is Advised That Nicaraguan Government is Weak—Conditions Likely to be Turbulent for Some Time.

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Nicaraguan government is mobilizing and despatching troops "all over the country" to suppress revolutionary outbreaks, Lawrence Dennis, American charge at Managua, advised the state department today.

Mr. Dennis reported that revolutions had broken out apparently in Leon, Chinadega and Corinto and in bordering communities.

All telegraph wires have been cut and railway operations have come to a stop.

State department officials have not yet received the reported request for American gunboat protection at Bluefields. If precautionary measures are found necessary for protection of American lives and property, however, adequate action will be taken.

Observers who have kept in close touch with the Nicaraguan situation since the present faction took over the government by a military coup, feel there is a strong possibility that conditions will be in a more or less turbulent state for some time.

Jersey Murder Suspects Are Held by Judge

Carpender and Stevens Held to Await Action of Grand Jury—Judge Says That It By No Means Follows That He Considers Defendants Guilty—Simpson Will Not Present Case to Regular Grand Jury.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 19 (AP).—Henry de la Bruyere Carpender and Willie Stevens were held for the grand jury today on charges of having murdered the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

County Judge Cleary, who issued warrants for Carpender and Stevens July 12, and before whom the hearing began last Friday, said the state had established a prima facie case and one that warranted the attention of the grand jury.

Carpender and Stevens were remanded to jail.

Grand Jury in Session.

The regular grand jury is in permanent session, and can be called in a few days. But the special prosecutor said he would not present his case to this grand jury "because the members have talked too much about the Hall-Mills case". A new regular grand jury succeeds the present one September 21. Senator Simpson also said that he will move to have revoked the $15,000 bail on which Supreme Court Justice Gummere released Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the slain rector, after she had spent fifty hours in Somerset county jail. Mrs. Hall is a cousin of the wealthy broker Carpender and a sister of the eccentric Willie Stevens.

Cannot Call Special Jury.

Judge Cleary said he knew of no statute providing for the impaneling of a "special grand jury". An extraordinary panel could be drawn in case of extreme emergency, he thought, under what is called the Elisor system. A supreme court justice would have to invoke such a grand jury, he said.

Hearing Unique Because of Publicity.

"It by no means follows," Judge Cleary said, "that I consider Carpender and Stevens guilty because I held them for the grand jury. The hearings was the usual preliminary hearing, magnified by the notoriousness of the Hall-Mills case. The hearing was unique only in respect to its length and the publicity given it. Such hearings, minus these facts, are held every day.

Heard Only One Side.

"It was an ex-parte affair. I heard only one side of the evidence but the defendants were identified in open court, and no judge could ignore that. I did not feel that I should usurp the powers vested in 23 grand jurors, and I preferred to pass the case to them for investigation and consideration. It is not the intent of the law that I should pass upon the credibility of witnesses."

MOTHER AND THREE CHILDREN ARE BURNED TO DEATH.

Franklin, Pa., Aug. 19 (AP).—A mother and three of her children were burned to death Wednesday when their farm home near Cooperstown was destroyed by fire. The victims were Mrs David Berkhiol, an infant son and two small daughters. The fire was caused by explosion of an oil stove.

Murderer Saves Life.

County Picnic In Rain Found Everybody Happy

Crowd in Afternoon Estimated at 7,000—State Trooper Displays Daring and Skill in Preventing Accident—Captain Fox Presented With Silver Cup—Neither Drizzle Nor Deluge Dampen Spirits of Picnickers Who Enjoy Every Feature.

About 6,000 people enjoyed the annual Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau-Chamber of Commerce Picnic at Forsyth Park Wednesday in spite of the rain, the estimate of 5,000 picnickers at 1 o'clock that afternoon which was made by the State Troopers being increased as the afternoon wore on and Kingstonians learned that the affair had not been called off.

Most of those who attended the picnic were from the towns near Kingston although some of the picnickers came from the further sections where heavy rainfall during the morning had destroyed all hopes of there being clear weather in Kingston. While a few ventured forth in the heavy rain from such towns, the majority who had planned to attend the picnic remained at home.

The rain seemed to make the affair more home-like than it might have been if the weather had been clear or the crowd bigger. There seemed to be more people who knew each other, probably due to the fact that in a smaller crowd it is easier to recognize friends, and the exchange of greetings becomes more noticeable.

Prepared for Wet Weather.

Practically evrybody who attended the picnic came prepared for rain. Raincoats, slickers, overcoats, umbrellas, overshoes were displayed in abundance, and the drop in temperature from the high points of the previous days made wraps of some kind most acceptable. There were many people who disregarded their umbrellas except when there was a sudden heavy downpour during the day, and nobody paid much attention to the slight drizzle which prevailed most of the time. Most of the events were run off in a drizzle, the exhibition by Troop C. of the State Troopers, under Captain Fox—an exhibition which far excelled that given last year by the same troop—taking place while the skies were shedding showers of varying degrees of intensity.

Only One Thrill.

Only one real thrill was furnished during the day and it fell to the State Troopers as usual to supply it. Last year one of the Troopers was thrown from his horse and received injuries which necessitated his removal to the Kingston City Hospital. Fortunately there was no accident to mar Wednesday's picnic, but there probably would have been had it not been for the presence of mind and almost instantaneous action of State Trooper Packard.

The Troopers had been doing their usual riding stunts which always delight crowds wherever the Troopers appear, and were preparing to conclude their program of riding. One of the acts performed by the Troopers during this closing part of the program consists of two Troopers riding down the field on one horse. Sometimes the two Troopers assume one position, sometimes another, but all are designed to show the skill of Troopers and horses.

Two Troopers were coming down the field, their legs braced in such a way that their bodies were at right angles to the sides of the horse they were riding, when at the lower end of the field the crowd edged out toward the center of the field until the space for the exhibitors was considerably narrowed. The mount ridden by Trooper Packard and his companion had been showing many signs of nervousness in the afternoon, and apparently did not respond quickly to the Troopers' guide signals, but ran directly toward the crowd which had swarmed out on the field.

Saved the Child.

One small boy who apparently was not more than five or six years old, was so anxious to see the act that he crowded far ahead of the others and stood directly in the pathway of the horse when the Troopers noticed him.

It was too late to swerve the horse sharply toward the center field, and most of the crowd moved backward as they saw the horse coming straight toward them. The little boy started to run but the older people were moving slowly and he turned for an instant to look at the oncoming horse and Troopers.

The horse was almost on top of him when Trooper Packard swung his leg clear of the horse's back, and with both arms around the animal's neck swung himself clear, landing on his feet a few feet ahead of the horse which his companion was meanwhile trying to rein in. Trooper Packard hurled the youngster to one side and himself received the full force of the horse's momentum which was sufficient to knock him down. The Trooper was on his feet in an instant and warned the crowd of what might happen when the next pair of Troopers came down the field.

Says Kitchener Story Was Fake

Singleton Gates in London Daily Sketch Tells How Story Was Simply an Attempt to Advertise Moving Picture.

London, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Daily Sketch today prints over the signature of Singleton Gates, a British newspaperman, a long story bluntly stating that Gates invented the whole story of the discovery of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener's body in Norway in conjunction with Frank Power, a British newspaperman. It was Power who announced that he had found Lord Kitchener's body and who brought a case to London supposed to contain the remains. Officials of the home office who opened the case said it was empty. Power contended that some one had tampered with the "Kitchener coffin."

Gates asserts in his story that Power was interested in a moving picture entitled "How Kitchener Was Betrayed," which was badly in need of publicity. He says the film was made as long ago as November, 1921, when it was shown privately in London to Lord Kitchener's sisters and several members of the House of Lords and the Commons, who after seeing it, bitterly denounced it. The promoter of the film therefore decided to advertise it to the utmost and the alleged discovery of Kitchener's body was the subsequent invention to aid in the exploitation.

Mrs. Boole Finds Death Rate Lower

National President of W. C. T. U. Optimistic Over Results of Prohibition—What Her Association's Researches Show.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 19 (AP).—Even with the heavy toll of poisonous bootleg liquor, the nation's death rate is considerably lower than in pre-prohibition days, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president, declared today in a message to the Minnesota State Convention of the W. C. T. U. Her conclusions were based on researches just completed by the organization, embracing the entire country and covering a period of twenty-five years.

"Our researches prove," the message said, "that alcohol is the largest single contributor to premature death, and that prohibition has made America the healthiest country on earth.

"The nation's death rate is ten per cent lower than ever before, with mortality from tuberculosis cut almost to a third of what it was."

Wife in New York Hurrah! Hurrah!

"Nobody Knows How Dry I Am" and "Nearer My God To Thee" Give Musical Expression to Happy, Loquacious Man.

He got on a trolley car near the West Shore crossing Wednesday afternoon, the happiest man in Kingston and willing to tell the world about it. Nobody interrupted his monologue, though all enjoyed it.

"I'm one happy man," he said. "Talk about your good times—just watch me. Oh, the times I'll have! Ha-ha, haw, haw, he-he, hi-hi, what a time I'll have. See that lady over there on the corner with an umbrella? Well, he-he-haw-haw, that's my wife and she's goin to New York and talk about your times, oh gee, what a time I'll have. Oh what a time, hi-hi ha-ha."

Then he produced a harmonica and as the car was turning into St. James street played most soulfully "Nobody knows How Dry I Am." This was followed by a dance tune, with the figures called off in between the notes.

Next was the profound philosophic and theological observation, "The only thing I've got against the Lord is that he let it rain the day of the farmers' picnic, he-he, haw-haw, hi-hi, ha-ha." As the car turned into Fair street the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee" were extracted from the harmonica and after alighting at the corner of John street there were further musical expressions.

"Where did he get it?" was the general inquiry of the audience.

Governor Smith "Doesn't Care to"

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—Governor Smith returned to his office at the Capitol Wednesday for the first time after his week's tour of state institutions.

To the eager queries of newspapermen for comment on the political side of his trip, the Governor made no reply. He was reluctant to discuss the dinner given him in Buffalo by several prominent Democratic leaders, at which he was reported to have told them that he would do whatever the Democratic convention at Syracuse wished.

The only fact emphasized by the executive was that he did not care to run for the office again.

After clearing up a number of matters of importance, the Governor had a round of golf this afternoon. He will leave the city again tomorrow night, going to New York, where on Saturday, together with Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, he will open the new vehicular tunnel under the Hudson river.

Cooked Cereal Harmful to Men

Says Dr. E. B. Forbes of Pennsylvania State College In Address Before Institute of Politics at Williamstown.

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 19 (AP).—The greatest error man ever made was that of basing his diet on cereal food, Dr. E. B. Forbes, of Pennsylvania State College, told the Institute of Politics Wednesday. Having first learned to cook his food, man softened its composition to the detriment of his physical welfare, a train of physical ills followed the decayed teeth that cooked food caused.

Cereal foods, he said, are deficient in mineral nutrition and vitamins and their proteins are of inferior quality.

Man heaped insult on injury, Dr. Forbes said, when he screened out the fine white flour from the grain, leaving the best parts for his farm animals. The climax of tragic comedy came when he learned to make chemically pure sugar containing no essential nutrient and to eat this on his refined cereal foods. The results are the deficiency diseases, which were termed the great qualitative food problem of civilization.

More acute, however, than the qualitative food problem, Dr. Forbes said, is the quantitative food problem, that arises from the constantly increasing population of the world. Three ways of solving the problem, he said, are possible: Starvation, warfare or the attainment of an equilibrium between births and deaths.

All I do is "soak and rinse" on washday

—yet I get whiter clothes than ever

I NEVER used a soap that rinses out so quickly, and so completely, as Rinso does.

Best of all, the dirt and stains float off in the rinsing. I don't need to do the least bit of hard rubbing—or even boil the clothes, because Rinso not only whitens, but sterilizes, too!

My clothes last much longer this easy "soak and rinse" way because now I never have to scrub them threadbare over a washboard. Yet they are whiter, brighter than ever!

Rinso is all I need on washday. No bar soaps, chips or powders. It makes the water so soft and sudsy. Just ask your grocer for

Rinso

The granulated soap that soaks clothes whiter—no scrubbing.

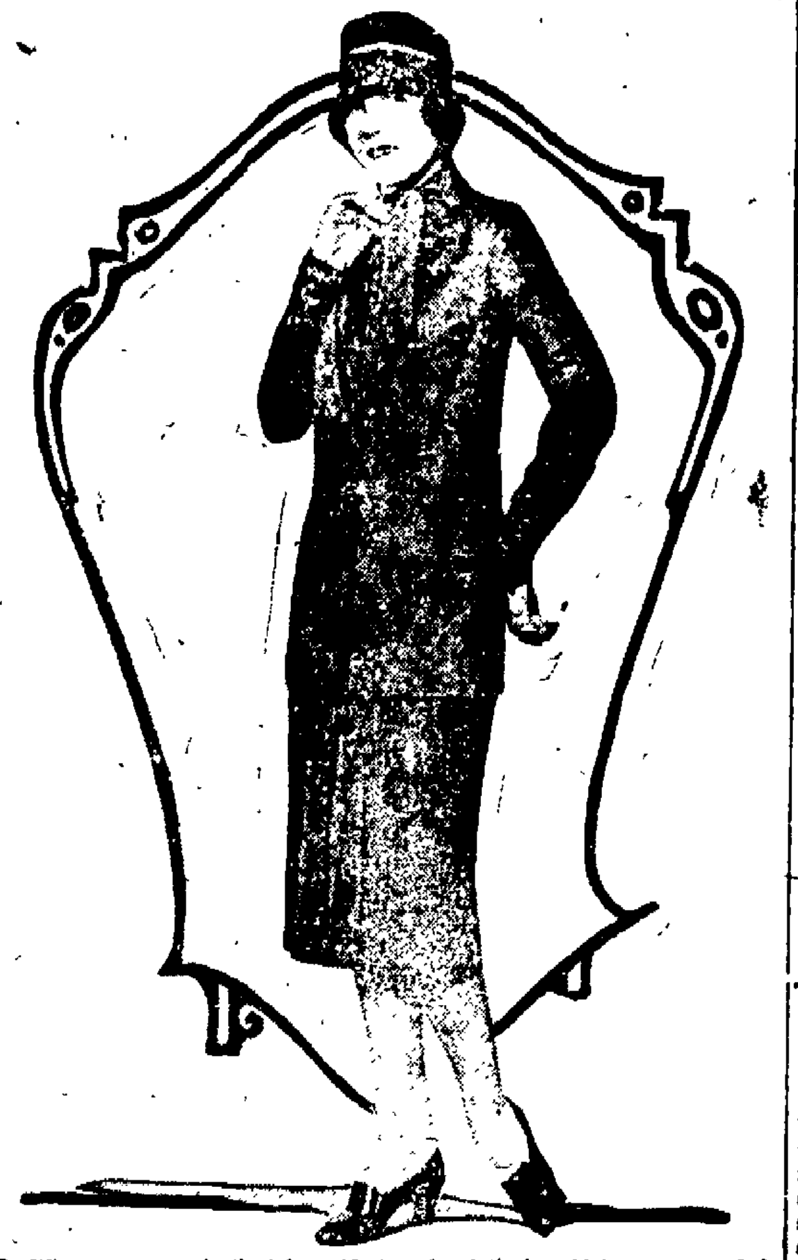
HELLMANN'S BLUE RIBBON Mayonnaise

STYLISTS FORESEE FOR AUTUMN VOGUE FOR THE TWO-PIECE SUIT



ANY woman may justly take pride in having her costume described as strictly tailored, for it is indeed very complimentary to her appearance. A strictly tailored ensemble assures a certain perfection not only in the finesse and classic simplicity of the suit or coat-dress itself, but in every accessory detail as well. The shoes, hosiery, hat, scarf, hand bag and of course the blouse which completes the two-piece suit must perforce evidence a discriminating knowledge of correct dress if one be strictly tailored.

The reward of exercising this careful judgment justifies the effort, for in the presence of the garishness of this season's wildly be-patterned silks and general flamboyant color the refined charm of the strictly tailored receives flattering emphasis.

That navy blue is now in smart fashion is most gratifying to the woman of conservative taste who aspires to be strictly tailored. For practical wear a correct regulation tailored suit is here pictured. It may be successfully styled of fine twill, covert or wool rep and for late fall the new suede cloth is widely recommended.

New color interest is manifest in early fall tailored suit and dress collections in that negre brown and the wine tones are shown, also the rose-brown range. Choice color blends are also brought out. Tawny rose-beige and subdued wine shades all blended and related are accented. Harmonizing hats and footwear will enhance the autumn tailleur.

The new felt hats to be worn with the smart tailored suit or coat show dented and creased crowns and rolling brims, with ribbon trimming a shade darker than the hat. Cocoa kid pumps with beige hose or strapped pumps of parchment shade are noted among newest daytime footwear. In hand bags, soft effects in pouches vie with novel envelopes. It is said that underarm bags will be fashionable.

Metal monograms on strap buckles individualize smart new styles in gloves.

As to the smartly tailored blouse, jabots of self-fabric and set in tucked vestee effects prevail of crepe de chine.

SOME FAVORITE DISHES

Many people prefer water ices, sherbets and other frozen dishes to ice cream. Here is one that once tried will always be popular:

Velvet Lemon Sherbet. — Take two cupfuls of sugar, the juice of three lemons and one quart of rich milk. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, regardless of the curdled appearance, as that will freeze out and the mixture will be as smooth as velvet.

Beaten Biscuit.—Into a pint of flour stir a teaspoonful of salt, and a cupful of cold water. Work to a stiff dough, transfer to a floured board and with a rolling pin beat the dough for fifteen minutes, turning and folding so that all parts of the dough may receive the pounding. Cut into biscuit, prick well with a fork and bake a light brown in a hot oven.

Cherry Pudding.—Mix together the following ingredients: One and one-third cupfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour sifted with two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, the yolk of an egg and the stiffly beaten white added at the last. Pour this batter over a quart of berries from which the juice has been drained, and steam one hour. To make the sauce, add a tablespoonful of flour and sugar to the juice; cook, stirring until well blended, add butter and nutmeg for seasoning. Cook until smooth.

Banana Sandwiches.—Peel and cut bananas into halves lengthwise, spread with raspberry jam and put together, lay on a plate and serve with whipped cream covering each.

Vanities.—Beat three eggs until light, add a tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cold water and a pinch of salt. Stir in enough flour to make a stiff dough. Knead and roll out very thin, after dividing into four portions. Tear off a piece the size of the hand and drop into hot fat to brown. The more irregular they are the prettier. When brown, sift powdered sugar over them and serve. Kept closely covered, they will be crisp until eaten.

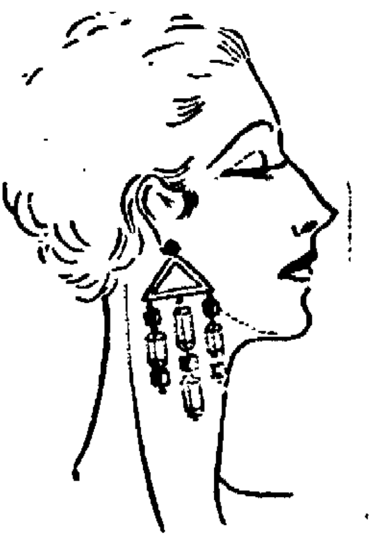
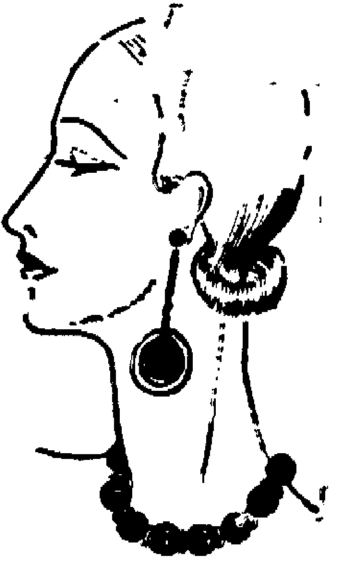
Crystal Heads the List of Desirable Jewelry Novelties—Very Exotic Are Some of the Trinkets Women of Fashion Now Affect.

Pearls are in excellent taste at all times and for all occasions—even women in the deepest mourning do not hesitate to wear them. Parisiennes have been wearing pearls with such an absolute disregard of consequences that one felt no obligation to assume that they were genuine. Since they were voted decorative, it became au fait to judge jewelry in general by a decorative rather than an intrinsic standard.



A Silver Triangle Shown in Paris by Jenny, and Supporting Crystal and Jet Pendants.



A Huge Crystal Ring Rims a Blue Glass Ball, in These Spectacular Earrings, the Choker Being Made to Match.

Crystals have been added to the list of lovely and relatively inexpensive things a fastidious woman may wear, even though she might, if she desired, be hung with diamonds. There still remains something barbaric about modern jewelry. New versions of the slave bracelet elicit praise, while earrings continue to be as picturesque as is compatible with one's type of environment.

It is still the mode to match up one's jewelry; necklaces and earrings, or chains and bracelets having formed the habit of reflecting one another. The choker has given way to more elaborate settings and to much longer chains.

Since so many women have decided to let at least the sides of their hair grow so that pins may be worn, there is rather a flurry of interest in decorative hair pins; of course, only for evening.

Seemingly there is no escaping the craze for color contrasts. Most certainly it extends to the fascinating realms of costume, as well as genuine jewelry.

THE WHY, WHEN, AND WHERE OF FASHIONS

Reptile Skins.

There are many maidens throughout the land who are eager to trample on serpent skin, perhaps to get even with the tempter for the trick he played on Mother Eve. According to Genesis, the serpent stands for all that is subtle, and its charms, in the shape of fashionable footwear, are still subtle for most of the feminine hearts.

When St. Patrick expelled the snakes and other varmints from Ireland, he left a species of large toads. Very old and large toads there and in other countries were greatly in demand during the Middle Ages for the reputed medicinal property of their skins, and because they were believed to have a precious jewel in their heads which could cure poisoned wounds.

Ask any old sailor and he will swear that sharks run away from feathers. It would be curious to know whether sharkskin shoes would be compatible with feather-trimmed hats, should the latter return into vogue again.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUG. 19, 1926.

A few months ago the tire manufacturers were loudly protesting because rubber was so high, and now they are reported to be "throwing fits because the price is so low that exports may be restricted 20 per cent."

It seems that nearly one-fourth of the 4,000 pacifists from thirty nations who assembled recently at Rheims are Germans—a fact which is said to have gratified Frenchmen who desire better relations with Germany.

An English writer, who says that American tourists make themselves unwelcome company by claiming that "we won the war," takes the ground that if one nation has any right to make such a claim it is Belgium, "whose splendid hold-up of the German army" gave France time to rush forward preparations and England time to send a small force to France's assistance.

A correspondent writes to the New York Times from Wimbledon, England, that the chief reason why Americans are disliked in Europe is their lack of courtesy, particularly in dealing with obliging policemen, minor public officials and servants. Whether there be much truth in this or little, it is well for tourists of every nationality to remember the old saying that a gentleman can travel anywhere in peace and safety.

POISONED ALCOHOL.

The news came out of Washington a few days ago that "Government chemists are working on more deadly formulae to poison alcohol so that bootleggers can not 'renature' it." Possibly there are some prohibitionists who read this announcement with satisfaction, reasoning that the law should be enforced at all costs and that it is only fair to allow people who insist on drinking bootlegged liquor to suffer the consequences.

But the bald announcement failed to please General Andrews. Returning from England, where he had succeeded in putting through improved international arrangements for catching rum-runners, the news of the government's plans seems to have worried him and, possibly after a hurried consultation at Washington, he announced that "our chemists are not seeking more deadly poisons, as has been published; they are merely seeking something that the bootlegger can't take out of alcohol as he has learned to remove most of the poisons from the old denaturing formulae." This seems to be a distinction without any great difference, for even General Andrews indirectly admits that "our chemists" are going to cause poison to stay put in spite of the cleverest bootlegger's efforts, and following his modification which fails to modify this further vouched-for news came from Washington: "It is admitted by prohibition enforcement authorities that Washington chemists are working on more deadly formulae to poison or denature alcohol so that bootleggers can not 're-nature' it." Bootleggers' patrons are duly warned.

A NEW BOLSHEVIST SCHEME.

The Russian equivalent of "never say die" appears to be the ever-hopeful slogan of the Bolsheviki. Their plans have received hard whacks and the fruitage of their labors has too often lacked in good measure, but they have never acknowledged defeat or considered any other course than an untiring effort to whoop it up. Disappointed in the results of their attempt to impose their theories on other nations through open propaganda and the sending forth of secret agents warranted to cook up revolutions, they have now turned to another method equally disdainful of the rights, privileges of choice and peace of other peoples. The Russian powers that be announce that when they complete their new 150-kilowatt broadcasting station they will at last achieve their ambition to dominate the world and ram their doctrines down its throat.

It seems they expect to "drown the voices of all the other European stations and not only send out as much propaganda as they please, whenever they please, but will prevent any intelligible communication by anybody else." Presumably they know this is hardly a way to win favor for the world revolution, but they seem to expect that listeners-in, doomed to give ear only to Bolshevist theories, will be driven into a receptive state of mind by intolerable weariness, that an unchanging and interminable radio diet of Marxian philosophy will force them to capitulate. But the enthusiastic Sovieteers seem to overlook one very important fact—that the bored listeners-in of the world will still be free to shut off the noise.

That Body of Yours

REMOVING A "COMPLEX".

Perhaps you have always been able to face the trials and troubles of life with a brave heart, and a mind at ease.

You have had your ups and downs physically and financially, and have kept real control of yourself.

However, you have been noticing lately that certain things bother you more than they formerly did. You dread certain places, conditions, or people, and will either not face them or face them with more or less fear.

Sometimes one particular person or condition will so get on your mind that you begin to lose your appetite and ability to sleep.

Perhaps you can notice that your friends seem to regard you a little differently, or at least you think they do, which really amounts to the same thing.

In other words, you have established what is called a "complex" by our nerve specialist. A complex is a group of ideas that gather around some one thing or some one person, in your mind.

Now these ideas are going to affect every thing you do in life, they seem to give you a "slant" in certain directions.

A simple complex usually gives no trouble because you learn to fight or overcome it. But perhaps you have been ill, have been under an unusual amount of strain. What was a simple complex becomes really severe, and if you do not receive proper treatment or work out your own system of cure, then the condition can become serious and call for expert attention from a nerve specialist.

And how does the nerve specialist affect the cure?

He questions you until he finds out just exactly what is troubling you, just when it started, what has aggravated it, and so forth.

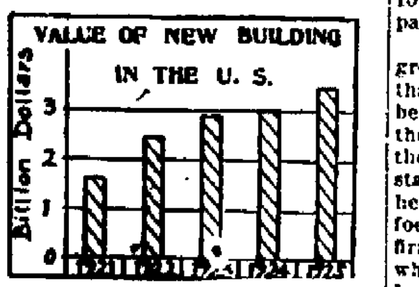
He talks very straight to you, and by getting your confidence gets straight answers from you. He knows that this confidence you repose in him is really his greatest asset in affecting a cure.

So he hauls your "complex", that is what ever is wrong with you, out from you, and then proceeds to show you how really unimportant it is, or what a mistaken notion you have regarding it.

He then puts it up to your good sense and the cure is complete.

This is what is called psychoanalysis, which means simply trying to find out the "buried complex" in your mind, lifting it out, so that the light of day or your own good common sense will drive it completely away.

REALTY BUYERS NEED PROTECTION.



Babson Park, Mass. (Special).—According to a recent statement of Henry J. Davenport, President of the Home Title Insurance Company, there is real protection needed now by realty buyers against the operations of the unscrupulous, and it is up to the dealers in real estate, developers of acreage and professional builders of homes to act. People contemplating the purchase now of a real estate mortgage must assure themselves more carefully than ever, we believe, of the intrinsic strength of the individual property. A tremendous building program has been carried on, as we all know, and the value of new building in the U. S. steadily rises.

Back in 1921 it amounted to barely 1¼ billion dollars, but in the past year it has gone over 2½ billion dollars.

Today's Story in New York History

By

Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Surprise and Capture of Paulus Hook, While British Occupied New York, was Executed August 19, 1779.

During the Revolutionary War the Americans constructed a fortification at Paulus Hook, now Jersey City, in 1776. The works were captured by the British in September of the same year.

The Hook was a sandy peninsula and at that time was connected with the main by a narrow marshy neck. A deep ditch was dug across the isthmus, which with the surrounding marshes, made the peninsula an island. Upon this peninsula the British erected strong military works, and used it as an outpost, while they were in possession of New York City.

The main works were upon rising ground in the vicinity of the intersection of Grand and Green streets. One redoubt was of circular form, and mounted six heavy guns. The other, southeast of it, was oblong in form, and had three twelve-pounders and one eighteen There were blockhouses and breastworks fronting the bay.

A detachment of five hundred from the Sixty-fourth British Regiment, and a few Hessians occcupied the fort, under the command of Major Sutherland.

A plan was formed for taking the fort by surprise, and its execution was intrusted to Major Henry Lee, then back of Bergen

A feeling of security made the garrison careless, and they were unprepared for a sudden attack when it was made. Preparatory to the attack, troops were stationed on the Hudson to watch the distant enemy, who might cross the river and intercept retreat, for it was not designed to hold the post when captured.

Lee marched with three hundred picked men, followed by a strong detachment under Lord Sterling, as a reserve Lee's march excited no surprise, for foraging parties of Americans as large as this were often out in that direction.

At three on the morning of August 19, 1779, Lee reached the Harsimus Creek, and within half an hour he crossed the ditch through the loosely-barred gate, and entered the main work undiscovered.

The sentinels were absent or asleep, and the surprise was complete. Lee captured 159 of the garrison, including officers, and then attacked the circular redoubt, into which a large portion of the remainder retreated, with the commander.

This redoubt was too strong to be taken by small arms, and Lee retreated with his prisoners, with the loss of only one killed and three wounded, and arrived back at camp in triumph at about ten o'clock in the morning.

The march was accomplished with difficulty as it was a distance of fully thirty miles over mountains, through morasses and defiles, and with their rear threatened by a considerable force.

This gallant act was greatly applauded in camp, in Congress, and throughout the country, and made the enemy more cautious, and taught them to entertain a higher respect for the valor and stratagem of the patriots.

On September 22 following, Congress honored Lee with a vote of thanks, and ordered a gold medal to be struck and presented to him. On the reverse side of the medal were these words in Latin: "Notwithstanding rivers and intrenchments, he with a small band conquered the foe by warlike skill and prowess, and firmly bound by his humanity those who had been conquered by his arms. In memory of the conflict at Paulus's Hook, nineteenth of August, 1779."

The feat of Lee and men was commemorated November 21., 1903 by the dedication of a monument on the Paulus Hook battleground. The memorial, erected under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is a rough-hewn granite shaft standing in the middle of a public square in Jersey City, and within the lines of the old fortification. An interesting feature of this dedication was the oration delivered by General Fitzhugh Lee, of Virginia, a grandson of the hero of the capture of Paulus Hook, "Light Horse Harry" Lee.

All Are Poets, Says Robinson

Those Commonly Known as Poets Are Only More Articulate and Clearer in Expression, Columbia Professor Tells Rotarians.

A real, live, practicing poet was the attraction at the Rotary luncheon this week, although it is not charged tha tthis poet in the author of "Lulu", "The Gol-darned Spider" or any of the other literary gems that are such favorites with the Rotarians. The poet was Henry Morton Robinson, editor of Contemporary Verse and an assistant professor of English at Columbia University, who is spending some time on the Maverick reservation. Professor Robinson talked about poets and poetry and asserted that all the good things of life are poetry and all men in their best moments are poets, differing only from these commonly known as poets because these last are more articulate and clearer in their expression.

The salesman expatiating on the merits of a watch or an automobile he is seeking to sell is a poet. Boredom is the menace of life and beauty that is in words is the antidote for boredom. The poet is under a strain, for he must struggle for bread and at the same time live a terrific internal life. Machinery rusts or is discarded, worn out and forgotton, but the ideas of the poets, expressed in gymnic words, how reverberant they become and how enduring!.

After outlining the three kinds of poets, the obvious and commonplace, the poet whose poetry is the grand organ of all thoughts and the poet who writes of things that occur only to the poet and who is likely to become hysteric and peter out, Professor Robinson told his audience that "the more you be the more you are a poet."

It was decided that the club would join with Poughkeepsie and Newburgh in a clambake some time in September, and, preceding the address on poetry that very appropriate anthem, "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No Moh" was sung most fervently.

DAIRY FACTS

WILD ONION AND GARLIC FLAVORS

One of the first pastoral plants to respond to the inviting rays or the spring sun is the wild onion, a relative of the garlics. It will be far ahead of the first growth of pasture grass when Mr. Farmer turns out his cows. Its tender shoots will make up a large proportion of the cows' daily ration, with a resulting onion flavor in the milk.

Everyone who drinks milk knows this typical springtime flavor. Of course it won't be found in the milk later in the season, because the onion plant soon reaches maturity and dies or the more abundant grass will have crowded it out. It presents, however, an important short-time problem.

Wild onion and garlic flavor is a problem for the farmer, because this flavor cannot be removed from milk in any practical way. Pasteurization will help in its removal, but only when the milk is mildly affected. Aeration and the forcing of air through the milk will not completely remove it. The whole question, therefore, according to Prof. Forrest C. Button of the dairy department of the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, resolves itself around the time interval between the feeding on wild onion and milking time.

Many experiments at various stations have been run to determine this period of time. In some tests one-half pound, in others one pound, of wild-onion tops were fed at different periods of time before milking. It was found that increasing the length of time between feeding and milking decreased the unpleasant odor and flavor. There was only a faint onion flavor in the milk drawn from cows four hours after feeding. This faint flavor disappeared when the milk stood for a few hours. In all cases the cream was affected most and the skim milk very little.

These feeding trials show that the producer should keep his cows from pastures badly infested with wild onion for at least four hours before milking in order to avoid onion-flavored milk. This rule may not be always safe, however, if any cow should eat more than a pound of onion tops.

The best way to solve this problem is for every dairyman with onion-infested pastures to try for himself and determine how long it is safe to allow cows in the pasture before milking.

Dairy Feed Bill May Be Kept at a Lower Figure

Feed constitutes about one-half the cost of milk production so that dairymen find it profitable to economize in the dairy ration so far as possible. Feeding practices with the herd of Jersey cows at the New York state agricultural experiment station at Geneva since 1900 show how the feed bill may be kept at a low figure without sacrificing high production in the cows.

Alfalfa or clover hay and corn silage have been used freely in the station's dairy ration and have decreased materially the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk. Legume hay comprises from one-half to three-fourths the hay fed at the station, the rest being timothy and orchard grass.

A simple home-mixed grain ration has been used at the same time, containing bran, oats, corn, and oil meal in about equal parts by weight. This mixture usually represents 18 to 19 per cent of crude protein, and during the past three years has cost from $31 to $44 per ton. This is a saving of about $15 per ton as compared with ready-mixed grain feeds of 24 per cent protein content. It has been demonstrated that well-cured legume hay in unlimited amounts, together with good corn silage, might be used alone or with farm-grown grains to maintain a satisfactory milk flow.

Dairy Notes

Milk is of value as a food only when it is clean.

• • •

Dairying is one of the nicest businesses in the world if you like it. If you do not, change to something else.

• • •

Rules for feeding are simply statements of facts established by careful study of many individuals. Each cow has characteristics that must be taken into consideration.

• • •

The successful dairyman is the man who applies the most approved business methods to his dairy operations, from the cow to the delivery of his product to the consumer.

• • •

One quart of average milk weighs 2.15 pounds, and 100 pounds of milk occupy a volume of 46½ quarts.

• • •

Do not throw away the skimmed milk. Feed it to the calves, pigs, and chickens. There is where part of the profit must come from.

• • •

Cow owners throughout the country are bringing the attention of farmers to losses running into thousands of dollars annually through poor skimming by out-of-date, or improperly adjusted cream separators.

Honored French Scientist

Picnic Circus Meets Success

"The Only and Original" Was Put on With Traditional Splendor Despite Rain—Some Marvelous Beasts Exhibited.

Elaborate preparations had been made for the out-of-door circus in the ring in the center of the "bowl," and for riding stunts to be put over by the State Troopers as the piece de resistance of the afternoon, to close the program. But the rain was merciless, falling just heavily enough to make the grass and ground dangerously slippery. This was a keen disappointment for Sam Bernstein had already made such a success of the tented side show that it was a sure thing the Circus be would put over would be just as good. In order to minimize the danger for the State Troopers, they were put first on the circus program, and were enthusiastically applauded as they entered the field on their beautiful horses.

Running true to form, the circus was opened with a Grand Entry of all the performers; whether man or beast, not to mention several exceedingly funny clowns.

Then came the applauded Captain Fox and his wonderful troop of Rough Riders, who did some thrilling horseback, horse-off, horse-under, horse-on-again riding, jumping through fiery hoops, and all in spite of the treacherously slippery ground. That they should receive a large silver loving-cup was most satisfactory to the entire audience.

The Circus Acts.

Then came the circus acts, with "Shorty Greene" acting as ringmaster. There was the Cavalcade, a riding act, with educated horses—the greatest team of Charleston Horses ever exhibited, and the following equestrians: A. Myers, J. Davenport, K. Davenport and W. Bennett. The Juvenile Tumblers, Roger Keough, Garry Shock, Jerome Lehr, David Levy did amazing feats. The Pachyderm act, given by the largest specimen ever exhibited, the only shimmying elephant (B Francis Davenport, B. Davis), with Stanford A. Rickard as keeper, was truly wonderful.

Another "just splendid" performance was that given by R. A. "Dick" Bernard Obenaus, the baton manipulator, late with the world renowned Sousa.

Talk about your cave men; Herman the Great, "Strongman," unchallenged for strength (W. Davis Hawk) could tell them a few things, judging from his performance.

"Something new-Up-To-Date; a sensation from the South, imported for this occasion at great expense," was the acrobatic dancer, Roger Keough, who both performed and danced astoundingly.

An act that was just full of thrills was the balancing act given by Ralph Mann.

Another clever act was that given by Cyrus La Zarabella and his group of Darwinian Jazz Babies—Relyea, Lehr and Levy.

Of course one of the prize performances of the circus was the exhibition of fancy horseshoe pitching by the world's champion horseshoe pitcher, "Putt" Mossman of Eldora, Iowa.

The collection of capricious clowns included Hussey (Ken Deyo); Tony, (Jim Winters); Sambo, (Roger Keough); Policeman, (Rob Brown); Izzy, (Bill Murray); Cyrus, (Ross Coddington); Hobo, (Ed. Sammons); Collegian, (I. Trowbridge); Giraffe, (Bill Neff and Harry Barnhart); Wampus Cat, (Walter and Robert Graem). The cast also included members of the Ulster County Riding Club, Boy Scouts and members of the Y. M. C. A.

The story of the circus could not be complete without special mention of the efficient and prompt aid and service given by Scout Master Smith and the Boy Scouts, and of Mr. Farrell of Woodstock and his assistants who gave such an attractive and splendid side show, in which many Ulster county soloists and amateur performers participated.

Learned From Americans

An American sailor and his companion are credited with teaching the first native pearl divers in the South Pacific how to bob under the surface to obtain shell, and in 1868 the first experiment in diving from a boat was successful. The natives soon became expert and frequently went to unusual depths.

Japanese divers, working the shell beds off islands in the Pacific ocean wear nothing more than a loin cloth, the costume adopted by divers in 1877, says the Sydney (Australia) Bulletin.

Some rich harvests of shell have been made and records show that one pearler, employing 40 native divers, averaged 25 tons of shell a year, despite the short season, which extends only from September to April.

Eyesight of Birds

British scientists, conducting experiments on bird eyesight, announce the following discoveries;

A thrush sees a worm writhing in grass 100 yards off.

A sparrow 50 yards away sees a dropped crumb or pea and immediately darts to it.

The swallow, skimming along 40 miles an hour, marks down gnats 100 yards ahead.

A hawk, poised 300 feet above a tangled brake, detects a mouse through heavy growth.

Misplaced Industry

A Boston woman returning home was astonished to find that her little son had cut several of the pictures out of one of his best books. She inquired why he had done so. "Well, mother," explained the young hopeful, "I had nothing to do for a few minutes, and you know how I dislike to be idle!"

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

New York—A business started 35 years ago with the peddling of sausages from a basket now has an annual income of $8,000,000 a year. Adolf Gobel's heirs have sold out to Wall Street bankers, who have taken note of the increasing purchases by apartment house dwellers from delicatessen stores.

Rochester, N. Y.—Mike Dempsey, also a fighter, will be in the hoosegow while Jack is hitting Gene. Mike once was a contender for the middleweight title, but he took the count in an encounter with John Clelland, a cop, who was once western New York heavyweight champion.

Providence—The wide appeal of golf: T. Suffern Tailer, Jr., and C. R. Snowden, of fashionable Newport, have caddies for their opponents in the semi-finals of the state junior championship.

Durham, N. H.—The perfect woman is yet to be found. Revelation to farmers' wives by Dr. Eugene Lyman Fiske of the result of the examination of 100,000 women in 12 years by the Life Extension Institute, New York. As steps toward perfection, however, he urged marriage and scrubbing of faces.

Fall River, Mass.—Short skirts have hit the New England textile industry hard. Senator Butler regards the depression as due partly to changes in style, but also to low tariff.

Fredericton, N. B.—The Babbitts, mother and daughter, are the best women tennis players in the province. Miss defeated Mrs. in the final round.

Paris—Here's Trude Ederle back from her grandmother's rejoicing that a girl of German descent was the first to swim the channel, buying in Paris a wardrobe which will dazzle Broadway when she marches in triumph like Bobby Jones.

London—Hobbs, the Babe Ruth of cricket, is there in a pinch. He opened up with a century of runs when Australia was ahead, thereby helping quite a bit toward England's first victory in 14 years. The Aussies fell down hard after an interval for tea.

New York—Page Diogenes; a taxi driver found $1,705 in cash in his cab and forthwith took it to a police station. William J. Kubner doesn't want anything that does not belong to him.

Ossining, N. Y.—If William Hoyer, negro slayer, must be electrocuted tonight, at least he will not be hungry. He is to have a dinner in the death house of his own selection, as follows:

One duck stewed, with one can of peas, one pint of olives and sundry dumplings.

Four slices of bread, boiled rice, tomato salad, strawberry short cake, one pint of vanilla ice cream, one raspberry soda, twelve cigars, one package of cigarettes.

Steam Shovel Digs Up Fossils

Fossil hunting for generations has been a back-breaking process of laboriously picking and shovelling remains of prehistoric fauna out of rock and clay 'way out in a sun-baked desert. But times do change. Today a huge mechanical shovel, using electric power from the Cleveland service system, is excavating fossilized fishes which lived in the Devonian period. It is doing it in a suburban region that some day will be overgrown by Cleveland and thereby will be rendered forbidden ground for the excavations of paleontologists. The shovel is digging up geologic information by the ton, its electric power having removed all backbreak from the process.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

A PENGUIN BREAKFAST

"Ah," said Mother Emperor Penguin, "there are some ridiculous penguins who build nests.

"Take Mrs. Johnny Penguin, for example, and Mrs. Adele Penguin.

"They want children brought up in cozy little homes.

"Now, my idea is different."

"So is mine," said Mother King Penguin.

"We just carry our precious eggs on our feet and after a time they hatch out.

"We don't go to all the trouble and fussing and fuming of finding the right place for a nest and then of building and keeping it so neat and tidy."

"We are different in many ways from our cousins—all the other kinds of penguins—but one thing at least is the same with all of us," said Mother Emperor Penguin, "none of us crawl or walk on all fours or fly up in the air or any of those commonplace things.

"We walk upright. Yes, sir, I mean madame, every single penguin walks upright and with style.

"Some people might say we wabble a bit, but that is the penguin's way.

"We look like gentlemen all dressed up for the evening in fine-fronted shirts and black coats.

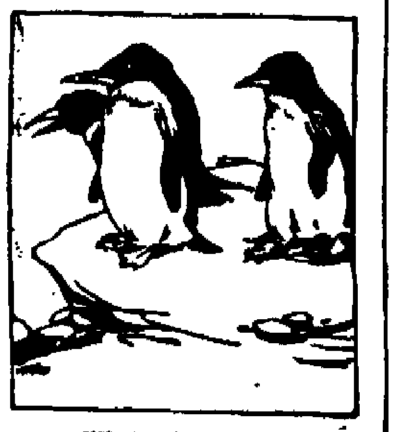
"We look as though we always had an engagement for a big dinner party and for a dance and for a big reception.

"But even if we haven't all these engagements, we're always dressed for them.

"But I must be off—it's breakfast time."

Mother Emperor Penguin walked back to her beloved child after she had filled her throat and her stomach with delicious little shrimps and delicate small squid, or cuttlefish, as they are sometimes called.

The little one put its mouth and head right into its mother's beak and fairly dived down her throat for the good things to eat.



"We Walk Upright."

"As you grow older, my love, I shall digest your food less and less.

"Now I eat it first, so you can use it more easily.

"Later I shall barely turn it around in my throat, for you will be older and your little 'tummy' will be stronger.

"When you are ten months old you will feed yourself, for then you will take to the water, and taking to the water goes along with getting your own meals, my lovely child."

But the little penguin child said not a word.

Only he thought to himself:

"Let the future take care of itself.

"For the present it is enough that I find my food down my mother's throat where it is digested for me, and that she gets it in the first place and that I do not have to bother.

"For the present that is all I ask."

Agnes Was Interesting

Little Agnes was to be the flower girl at her aunt's wedding and her grandmother was teaching her how to comport herself. But the little girl was so quiet during the instruction that grandma asked, rather sharply, if she were listening.

Agnes replied promptly: "'Course I is. My ears ain't closed, even if my mouf is."

Subtlety

The six-year-old boy had told a fib and had been commanded by his mother to go to bed in the dark. He started reluctantly, and upon taking a long look at the dark stairway turned to his mother and said:

"Mother, don't you think you'd better come along and see if I really go to bed?"

New Tooth Born

Rose had just got a new baby brother and she was much pleased with him.

One morning she woke up and, finding a tooth had come through during the night, jumped up and ran into her mother's room, saying, "Oh, mamma, I've got a new tooth. It was born while I was asleep."

Rather Inconsistent

Little Mary always had an objection ready to hand either about going to bed at night or getting up in the morning. One night, when her mother reminded her that it was her bedtime, she said:

"It isn't fair. At night you tell me I'm too little to stay up, and in the morning you say that I'm too big to stay in bed."—Youth's Companion.

The John Wanamaker retail store in Philadelphia is said to be the first store to be lighted by electricity. On the night after Christmas, 1878, it turned on its 20 arc lamps, thereby becoming "as light as day" to every one's astonishment.

CONQUERING THE PACKING MILES

Johns-Manville Sea Rings

Through literally thousands of miles of rod or plunger travel, Sea Rings last longer and function more efficiently. They conserve power and save wear on both rod and packing because they are constructed on scientific principles. Because the action of Sea Rings is automatic, they are supreme in preventing waste and stopping leakage. Like the marathon runners of old, Sea Rings cover the miles easily and thoroughly.

Every other member of the Johns-Manville Standard Seven Packings family is prepared to perform its individual engine room duties. They have durability. Meeting at least 32 ordinary plant requirements, Standard Seven Packings offer the boon of standardization. They simplify ordering, prevent delays and mistakes in using packing and guard against shut-downs. Let us tell you about Sea Rings and the "Other Six" long distance packings.

Origin of Budget

Budget is from the old French "bougette," meaning a wallet. The use of the word in its present sense is from the custom of bringing into the house of commons all papers pertaining to matters of expenditure, in a leather bag, and laying them on the table.

Habitual Criminals

Criminals who are habitual offenders are more intelligent than first offenders, according to the findings of Carl Murchison of Clark university; but he explains this by saying that intelligent crooks show greater persistence than unintelligent ones.

SELECT SWINE BREED ON PERSONAL LIKES.

More Difference Between Individuals Than Between Breeds.

Three points should be taken into consideration by farmers who have to choose a breed of hogs to raise, or who desire to change breeds, according to the animal husbandry department at the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca.

The first of these is personal preference, they say, for if a farmer has a breed which he likes he will take better care of them and will feel better satisfied.

The second factor is community preference. The most popular breed in a community usually has been selected because of its adaptability to the locality or suitability to the market needs. Then, too, a uniform product in a locality makes marketing easier and frequently brings higher prices.

The adaptation to local conditions is the third factor to take into consideration. This can be illustrated by the white hog which is popular in this section but which suffers from skin scald in the south.

The department says, however, that there is often more difference between individuals of a breed than there is between breeds. From this standpoint, they advise that it would be more profitable for a farmer who already has a herd to practice careful selection and judicious culling than to try to find a better breed.

Threaten Life Of Brookhart

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 19 (AP).—Threats against the life of Colonel Smith W. Brookhart, Republican senatorial nominee, were responsible for a guard of deputy sheriffs and detectives being placed around him upon his arrival here yesterday to make an address at a fair.

Two residents of Marion received letters which the sheriff considered of sufficient importance to warrant a guard. One missive is said to have contained this threat: "He will be a dead man if he is permitted to speak at the fair."

SEPARATE THE SEXES WHILE THEY ARE YOUNG.

When the cockerels in a poultry flock reach a live weight of from one and one-fourth to two pounds each they should be separated from the pullets and put on a different range or in another enclosure. This will aid in the growth of both the pullets and cockerels, according to the poultrymen at the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca. They explain that the pullets will be less crowded and will thus have a better chance to eat and grow.

The cockerels fight less and grow faster when they, too, have less competition in their range area and roosting quarters. They should have a shelter house, preferably among trees, to insure shade and open air roosting places. To raise vigorous males for breeding purposes the cockerels should be grouped together by size and vigor; all should have large range areas, with feed hoppers and water troughs in at least three separate parts of the range so that there will be less chance for intimidation and consequent under-nourishment for the smaller birds.

In choosing cockerels for breeding or for market, begin the selective process as soon as the birds begin to show marked sexual characteristics. The time may vary according to breed and feed, but, for leghorns they may be selected first at from six to eight weeks of age, and from ten to twelve weeks in the heavier varieties. The earlier the market cockerels can be separated from the rest for crate fattening, the better, because the price by weight for broilers decreases with the season faster than the birds can put on weight. The larger the birds are, the more it costs to feed to add a pound of weight. Market cockerels are unprofitable boarders after they reach market age.

Award Contract For New Dirigible

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Aircraft Development Company of Detroit was given a contract for construction of a 200,000 cubic foot metal-clad navy dirigible, to be completed in 400 days.

The cost of the ship was fixed by congress at $300,000. The only bid to be received was from the Detroit company, whose officials had been the chief movers in the proposal that the government undertake experiments with the metal-clad airships.

Congress also authorized construction of two navy dirigibles of 6,000,000 cubic feet each but made no appropriation for these ships.

The metal-clad ship is to be only of sufficient size to test the theory of the builders that ships of this character will prove more efficient than the present Zeppelin types.

PLAYING THE PART OF PEACEMAKER

By FRANK FILSON

(© by W. G. Chapman.)

WHEN Uncle Will came back from the West at forty-five, with a wad of money, we were delighted that he should think of spending the winter in the old homstead where he had not put in an appearance for ten years.

"But what gets me," he said, "is the way you folks here quarrel. Seems to me as though you hadn't any time to do anything else, and liked it."

I flushed. "If you are referring to George Bailey, uncle," I began.

"Lydia," answered Uncle Will, "if you talk sassy like that you won't get any more candy from me. What do I care about George Bailey? He isn't half good enough for you, and I'm glad you had a falling out."

"He is!" I cried indignantly. "He's the finest boy in Surbiton." And then Uncle Will gave me one of his maddening smiles and walked away.

It was true enough what he had said, though. We did have trouble in Surbiton. It was what you call a spinsters' village, and everybody said I was a fool to let George go. But he humiliated me so, dancing with red-headed Miss Florence Smith twice that night, and only giving me eleven dances. And we had just become engaged, too.

Uncle Will was a Surbiton man. They said in his young days he had been engaged to Miss Barrett, the school teacher. If he had, nobody was the wiser. He and Miss Barrett greeted each other just as calmly as though they had always been acquaintances and there had never been anything else between them. And what puzzled me was how Uncle Will could want to put in so long a time at Surbiton, instead of making for the white lights of the city, with his wad to spend.

Now I come to my story. It was about three weeks after Uncle Will returned that Surbiton was electrified by an itinerant peddler who came along the street. Peddler is perhaps a wrong way of describing him, for he had nothing to sell. He drove a broken-down horse and sat inside a buggy with a closed top. When he reached Hi Perkins' vacant lot he unhitched the horse and turned it out to graze. Then he took down the top of the buggy and hoisted his sign:

WILLIAM ITT
International and Intercolonial
Peacemaker of America.

Naturally half the village was around Mr. Itt's wagon in about ten minutes, gaping.

"What's it mean?" asked Hi Perkins, who didn't like peddlers pitching on his lot, though he was too kind-hearted to shoo them away.

"I'm the international and intercotonial peacemaker," says Mr. Itt, who was a little, sandy, dried-up man. "I make peace. Bring on your quarrels. Now!"

"Why don't he try to make up between Jim Barnes and his wife?" shouted one of the wags. But Mr. Itt took a serious view of the situation.

"This ain't no joke, ladies and gents," he said. "It's a respectable perfession, mine is. It's a necessary one, too. There's far too much quarreling in these days. I made peace only last week between the mayor of Deedles and his lady, and the town's been clean of graft ever since. Now, ladies and gents, my fee is a dollar, and my tent's open by appointment at any hour after dark, when you can come in quietlike and nobody will see you."

Well, that raised a laugh, but, would you believe it. Sadie Reach, our maid, declared that she saw Mr. and Mrs. Barnes stealing away out of Mr. Itt's tent, looking as pleased as a courting couple the next morning. And as the days went by and Mr. Itt remained, it certainly seemed that an improvement had come to Surbiton. Folks who hadn't been on speaking terms for years began to say "Hello!" to each other, and spite fences were taken down, and nobody complained when the neighbors' chickens got into his garden any more.

Well, what happened next scared me. I was strolling near Mr. Itt's tent, just by chance, you understand, when the little man came out and accosted me.

"Mademoiselle," he said, executing a bow—for that is the only word suitable for the absurd little bob he made, "can I be of service to you?"

My heart went into my mouth and I couldn't find any words with which to answer him.

"If you was to come to my tent about eight o'clock tonight," said Mr. Itt, "I might be able to help you know yourself. You have trouble in your heart, mademoiselle. I can trace it in the third line of your right hand, running from the Mount of Hercules to the Oasis of Luna."

And with these enigmatical words he beat a retreat into his tent, leaving me decidedly annoyed and a little humiliated.

I knew he couldn't possibly have heard about me and George, because our engagement had been kept a profound secret outside the family, and only the relations and the servants knew about it, and they wouldn't have breathed a word to anybody. However, I began to get piqued by Mr. Itt's words, and about eight o'clock that night, finding myself—quite by chance, you understand—in the vicinity of Mr. Itt's tent, I thought I would drop in to see whether there really was anything in what he had said about the Mount of Hercules.

Though it had begun to dawn on me that I had had my hands in my muff and that he hadn't seen them at all.

Mr. Itt seemed to have been waiting for me, for hardly had I drawn near his tent when he was outside, seizing me by the hands.

"You have come," he said. "I am glad you have come. Mademoiselle, you remind me of my dear friend his excellency Ching Foo, the grand vizier of Tartary, who had a fearful quarrel with his wife last week over the spending money. He came to me.

"'Mr. Itt,' he said, 'I have had a row with my wife and I wish I were dead. She wants a hundred yen a week to buy her own clothes with. What would you do?'

"'Give her two hundred,' I answered, and he saw the justice of it and went away happy. They're reconciled now."

Mr. Itt's views seemed sensible to me, but all the while he was repeating this absurd patter he kept glancing back nervously over his shoulder, as though he were expecting somebody. And as he ended he made an abrupt little dive into the tent and pulled the flap to. I heard a murmur of voices inside, and I wondered whether I had happened along when another couple was there.

And I was still wondering when, to my amazement, somebody put his hands over my eyes.

And now my heart began to pit-a-pat. Yes, it was George.

"I'm so sorry, sweetheart," he said. "I see how wrong I was to dance twice with Florence Smith. I'll never look at her again. Mr. Itt persuaded me that I had been a fool. Won't you forgive me, dearest?"

"Well, I was considerably hurt, but then I felt something being squeezed over my finger, and it felt like that half-hoop of diamonds, which I had loved so much, and which I had intended to have enlarged the day before I gave it back to George. So what could I do?"

We had the happiest time there, and then we decided that we ought to thank Mr. Itt. It seemed too wonderful to be true. So we went up to the tent and called.

Mr. Itt seemed to be scolding somebody, I thought, and he didn't hear my voice. I wanted to thank him and so I opened the tent door. And who do you think were inside? Uncle Will and Miss Barrett.

Uncle Will was on his knees before her, and her face was as hard as stone. Just then Uncle Will saw us, and he sprang to his feet, looking rather foolish.

"Go away, you young vipers!" he bellowed. "What do you mean by intruding upon—why, it's little Lydia! And George!"

Somehow instinct told me just what to do at that moment. I went up to Miss Barrett and kissed her and placed her hands in Uncle Will's.

Suddenly Miss Barrett's face softened, and a minute later she was crying in Uncle Will's arms. Uncle Will said afterward that it must have been the force of our example. I think this was correct. But would you ever believe that Uncle Will had hired Mr. Itt for the performance? That's what Aunt Rose Barrett Templeton says. And Uncle Will doesn't deny it. He says he's got such a good wife he doesn't want to remember the trouble he had in getting her.

Strangely enough, George said something like that to me yesterday.

Try Engineer's Method for Solving Problems

Every business executive will find something of value in certain basic factors which are applied to engineering. Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, says in Forbes Magazine:

"We must use analytical processes of thought to examine conditions before we can be assured of reaching correct conclusions; and the engineer has been trained to make his analysis as a precedent to reaching a correct solution. The application of the word 'engineering' to its present use is very broad, but its sense remains the same. Engineering has become a comprehensive term which covers a constant search for better methods, whether they concern short cuts in mental processes, critical analyses, the introduction of automatic machinery in labor-saving devices, or any other constructive effort. It also points out to a man a definite goal, shows him how to shape his efforts, and marks the way by which he may attain his object.

"If we divide our problems into successive steps as an engineer would do, conditions are immediately clarified. An engineer studies the object to be achieved, analyzes his materials, and then determines how they can be used most economically and to the best advantage. Most problems may be divided into three parts, generally speaking. First, a correct analysis and the drawing of conclusions as to the right course of action; second, the decision as to the most advantageous manner of carrying it out; and third, the independence and courage necessary to follow the outlined course."

Hold Mexican General in Jail

Estrada and Rest of His Army Fail to Furnish Bond When Arraigned Before U. S. Commissioner—Border Town Wants Protection.

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 19 (AP).—A garrison of 500 American troops from the Ninth Corps Army Area at San Francisco has been requested by the town of Calexico as a protection in case a revolt breaks out across the line in the Mexican border town of Mexicali, Capital of the northern district of lower California.

The request for the soldiers was despatched yesterday by the city trustees of Calexico following a report that a revolutionary plot is still active in Mexicali, despite the arrest on the American side a few days ago of General Enrique Estrada, former Mexican secretary of war and 150 of his followers.

Estrada And Men Arraigned.

Estrada and the leaders in his move to seize lower California were arraigned before a United States commissioner here yesterday, charged with violating the neutrality of the United States.

The general was held under bond of $20,000, his chief aide. Aurelo Sepulveda, a former Mexican army officer, under bond of $10,000, while bail for other members of the staff ranged from $1,000 to $5,000. None of the prisoners posted bond.

Hold Prisoners In Barracks.

All of the prisoners, including 115 of the rank and file of the force were still held today at the marine barracks under guard of the navy. Arrangements are being made to employ civilian guards, following a telegram from Washington to the United States marshal's office at Los Angeles that the navy cannot lawfully guard the men.

Nineteen Killed In German Wreck

Tragedy Attributed to Deliberate Loosing of Fish Plates by An Unknown Person—Five Others Seriously Injured.

Lehrte, Germany, Aug. 19 (AP).—Nineteen persons were killed and five seriously injured early today when the Berlin-Cologne express, speeding at 50 miles an hour, was derailed near here. The tragedy is attributed to the deliberate loosing of the fish plates by an unknown person.

Police describe the wreck as the worst attempt in eighteen years on the lives of the traveling public in Germany.

Although the loss of life at first was not believed great, it mounted steadily as further victims were found when the debris of the wreck was removed with difficulty.

Two Hurt When Car Hits Pole

An automobile occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burnett of New York was badly damaged and the occupants injured Wednesday evening when the car collided with a pole near the Glenerie hill following a tire blow-out. When the tire burst the car became unmanageable and left the road. At the time of the accident they were driving north on their way to Schenectady. Tourists passing brought them to this city where their injuries were attended by Dr. C. L. Gannon. Mrs. Burnett suffered from lacerations on her face and other slight injuries and Mr. Burnett was cut about the face and suffered from bruises about the chest where he was wedged against the steering wheel. The car was towed to the Stuyvesant Garage and Mr. and Mrs. Burnett went to The Governor Clinton Hotel where they will remain until able to proceed on their way.

News of the Day In Wall Street

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—The output of smelter copper in July by the principal producing companies of the world was 244,000 pounds greater than the month before, amounting to 248,544,000 pounds. Production for the seven months of the year was 1,824,956,000 pounds against 1,780,002,000 pounds in the same period of 1925. Production at the Kipawa mill of the International Paper Company at Temiskaming, Quebec, is now devoted entirely to sulphite pulp, used in the manufacture of rayon. This step has been necessitated by the demand for raw material resulting from the reduction of rayon prices on June 1.

International Railway Company reports profit of $106,441 for the first half of 1926 after taxes and charges, in contrast to a deficit of $244,015 in the first half of 1925.

Thwarts Bandits After Being Shot

Corning, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—Glen B. Ostrander, of Wellsboro, Pa., ex-service man and president of the Merchants' Credit Association of that place, will receive a suitable gift in recognition of his bravery in thwarting the attempt of two highwaymen to hold him up Tuesday night.

The association has also offered a reward of $250 for information leading to the arrest of the bandits. Mr. Ostrander carried a large sum of money for the association in addition to valuable papers that could not be replaced.

Stopping along the highway near Wellsboro to pick up two men whom he thought wanted a ride, Mr. Ostrander was shot through the arm by one of the men as he jumped on the running board. He stepped on the gas and the stranger jumped off, both men firing two shots after the car. One went through the windshield and the other a fender.

"PINK Brush?"

Act before too late!

DO your gums bleed when you brush them? Calculus, Pyorrhea's wedge, has attacked!

You can free yourself from the clutches of this sinister foe by a new and simple means—quickly. We invite you to try it. At no cost to yourself. Simply mail the "Convince Yourself" Coupon below. Make the test.

Calculus is a "liquid cement" in your saliva. First sticky, it soon hardens. It forms a crust on your teeth as hard and abrasive as concrete. It catches all food, coffee and tobacco stains and dims the lustre of the white enamel. It works up under the gums prying them from the teeth. Stop its deadly course immediately!

Ordinary dentifrices are powerless to aid you. Only one thing will positively remove calculus in its semi-hardened and near-hardened state—that is, "Tri-Calcium Phosphate," a remarkable health agent.

Dental science has now combined this wonderful "Tri-Calcium Phosphate" in a pleasant, tasty tooth paste—ORPHOS. With eleven other gum-healing ingredients! Dentists everywhere endorse it. Send for trial tube. End this calculus menace. Stop that startling "pink brush." Feel a new cooling sensation in the gums. Observe how beautiful your teeth are after ORPHOS has removed the clinging calculus.

COMMON COLD IS IN FOR BATTLE

Joint Action of Many Sciences Proposed to War on Disease.

New York.—Medical men and fundamental scientists are asked to co-operate in a determined effort to conquer the common cold, which is said to be the most persistent and harmful enemy of mankind, causing more deaths and greater economic waste than any other disease.

The joint attack was suggested by Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation, in a recent address before the American Drug Manufacturers' association, in which he urged that body to bring together physician, pharmacologist, chemist, bacteriologist and pathologist for the purpose of making a co-ordinated study of the common cold and formulating a cure for it. The Drug Manufacturers' association has appointed a committee to co-operate with the Chemical Foundation in instituting the work of research planned.

As in the days of war, scientists in all fields will be asked to pool their knowledge and resources in an exhaustive investigation of the evil to be fought. Each will contribute his share in close co-ordination with the others. In this way all the aspects of the disease will be covered and what is now a scourge may yield to the common attack of experts and cease to be a blight on human health and happiness.

Colleges Will Help.

The 7,000 hospitals and the 400 universities in this country will be asked to become partners in the undertaking. They will become Pasteur institutes to study the nature of the cold and to use the facilities of their laboratories in such a way as to make each supplement the work of the others. Hospital and laboratory work of this kind will be supported from a common fund to be created for that purpose.

There will be no difficulty in raising the fund, Mr. Garvin thinks. The main task, according to him, is to lead the public to see the stupendous waste in physical energy and economic productiveness which the common cold causes, and induce organizations already existing and amply equipped to merge themselves in a collective endeavor.

In Mr. Garvin's opinion the resources of the whole domain of fundamental sciences are needed to achieve victory. As all sciences overlap, the task of conquering disease is no longer that of the physician alone, but of the chemist, the physiologist, the pharmacologist and the bacteriologist as well. The common cold is a disease that demands the co-operation of all these scientists. It challenges, likewise, the employer, the business man and the parent.

Other Ills Have Yielded.

The pooling of the resources of all the sciences involved, Mr. Garvin believes, can be depended on to accomplish against colds what similar co-operation has accomplished against other diseases. Scarlet fever, smallpox, tuberculosis, hookworm, yellow fever, diphtheria, typhoid fever and diabetes have thus been subdued. Intelligent interest on the part of the public in any struggle of this sort for human well-being is a requisite of success

The whole human race is weakened by the common cold. The expectant mother is affected by it and transmits its influence to the child. Because the common cold is regarded as an unavoidable disease, people are inclined to pay little attention to it, though the need to fight it is as urgent as if it were a disease with a terrifying name.

More than half of the expenditure of the hospitals of the country goes toward combating the effects of the common cold. From 60 to 80 per cent of the physician's practice deals with ailments attributable to the same cause. The lion's share of the nation's $600,000,000 drug bill is spent for cold remedies. Of this amount three-fifths is paid for patent medicines alone, most of which are sold as cold alleviatives.

There are said to be 45,000 drug items on the market, most of them supposed remedies against the common cold or its effects. Thirty years ago there were 2,700 items on the drug list, all told. The fact that there are so many "remedies" against the cold would seem to indicate that some of them are not remedies at all.

An Enemy of Health.

According to figures available, the ravages of the common cold are far beyond anything imagined by those who suffer from the disease without paying much attention to it. It compels every man, woman and child to abstain from work for several days every year—some estimates run as high as seven days. It paves the way for other diseases. It imperils and causes the postponement of surgical operations.

During the influenza epidemic all such operations, except in emergency, were delayed two weeks in all the hospitals in the city. This was due to the fear of post-operative pneumonia, which develops after an operation and spreads through a ward rapidly. Ninety per cent of child mortality is due to colds.

The waste caused by common colds to the industrially important industries is enormous. Besides suffering direct loss in productivity, these industries are obliged to maintain expensive medical departments, employ large staffs of health workers and engage safety experts to attend to cases that are the outgrowth of colds. They could afford to pay large sums to eliminate or reduce the loss thus entailed.

Considerable work has been done toward ascertaining the nature of the disease. The bacteriologists have spent years in laborious investigation. The medical profession made an exhaustive study of respiratory diseases during the war. The United States public health service, numerous health committees and local health departments as well as insurance companies have contributed to the purely statistical presentation of the problem.

Cause Still a Mystery.

In spite of all attempts to determine the specific cause of the common cold, the cause remains unknown. A cold, as the doctors explain it, is a catarrhal inflammation of the lining of the nose, mouth and throat. It is held by some to be due to infection with some peculiar germ which as yet has not been found. Some think that this micro-organism is so small that it cannot be detected even by the most delicate instrument. At various times various bacteria have been thought to be the cause of colds, but no definite organism has yet been chosen to bear the blame. Medical authorities generally are not quite agreed as to the bacterial origin of the disease. Evidence is still being collected and weighed.

Others think that the cold is due to chilling, wet feet, wet clothing, exposure, drafts, etc. But people who live in the colder regions of the earth seldom suffer from colds. Eskimos are not subject to coughs and colds, even when exposed to dampness and drafts. They often fall ill, however, after visiting a ship.

Colds are most common in the temperate zone. In this country few persons are immune from them. Not more than fifteen out of every hundred are lucky enough to escape with only one cold a year. The ailment is most frequent in early childhood and least frequent after middle life.

According to Dr. A. R. Dochez of the Presbyterian hospital, who is doing special research in the field, the cold, in itself, is of comparatively little importance. Its chief harm lies in the fact that it predisposes the patient to more serious diseases, such as measles, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and lobar pneumonia.

How Chemists Can Help.

Chemistry, Doctor Dochez said, can contribute to the fight against the common cold by inventing some antiseptic to be used locally to shorten the life of the bacteria or stop the development of the induced disease.

The aid which chemistry is in a position to lend the physician grows in scope almost daily. In many instances it has made the very progress of medicine possible. Ether, discovered in the Thirteenth century, began to be utilized as an anesthetic five centuries later. Magnesium sulphate, used for relieving lockjaw, burns, strychnine poisoning, etc., was recognized by medicine only after two centuries. The medicinal properties of amyl nitrite became known to the physician 23 years after its discovery by the chemist.

Thus, humanity has continued to suffer unnecessarily because physician, chemist and pharmacologist were not brought together to work out a problem none of them could solve separately.

The complex ailments of the body cannot now be treated by one class of scientists alone. Other groups must take a hand in the work, the labors of all to be co-ordinated and unified.

It will be the duty of the new body sponsored by Mr. Garvin to create the conditions necessary for co-operative research into the nature and the cure of the common cold and other ailments.

Dad Deserts Family of Twelve as "Lesson"

Indianapolis, Ind.—Owen Marcum, held in the Marion county jail as a fugitive from Seattle authorities, is just giving his family a little lesson in self-denial, he explains.

Marcum admitted leaving his wife and eleven children, but said he was just teaching them a lesson and sought to make his wife realize just how much she needed him.

Arrested at the home of his father, John R. Marcum, near Lawrence, Marcum said he is ready to go home, but indicated there was some question of a widow in California with nine children with whom authorities were attempting to connect him. The sending of money to the widow of nine to enable her to come from California is being investigated.

"I didn't intend to desert my wife; I only wanted to stay away long enough for her to realize how much she needed me," Marcum said.

Men Without a Country Total 1,000,000 in U. S.

Washington.—The "man without a country" of book fame would have plenty of company were he to set foot on American shores.

More than 1,000,000 persons in the United States, or approximately 1 per cent of the total population, are in the same fix, and most of them don't know it.

This revelation is made by Harry E. Hull, commissioner of immigration. The commissioner explains that this total of "outcasts" has been created largely by aliens who have overstayed their temporary entries and by tourists who, en route to some other country, stopped off here, found a job, and settled down. Many also came over the borders when restrictions were less rigid, lost their original citizenship by remaining here too long and then forgot or ignored American citizenship requirements.

Woman's Weapon Passe

Women have regarded tears as an "absolute weapon," says a writer in the London Mail, largely because the young man of today, instead of being moved sympathetically, begs her "not to make an ass of herself."

Stone Mason Who Won Place in Literature

Hugh Miller, a master of picturesque English prose, began life as a stone mason in the quarries of Cromarty, says Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, encyclopedist. He spent fifteen years with hammer and chisel, and his chief literary work, "Scenes and Legends in Northern Scotland," was not done until he obtained the position of an accountant in a Cromarty bank. He was a zealous supporter of the nonintrusion principle that shook the Church of Scotland at the time, and as such wrote pamphlets that created much stir, so that in 1840 he was called to the editorial chair of the Edinburgh Witness. We owe to him several interesting books, of which perhaps "The Testimony of the Rocks," printed in 1857, is the most remarkable.

His life had been simple, his means small, but the unceasing trials and distractions of journalism, together with the strain of his other literary work, unhinged his mind, and when but fifty-six years old, in an impulse of madness, he shot himself on Christmas eve, 1856.

Species of Pine Trees Bears Enormous Cones

Most fir trees bear cones of moderate size, but such is not the case with Coulter's pine, of California, says St. Nicholas. This species produces cones which are often 12 inches or more in length and 6 inches in diameter at the widest part. The cones, which are very solid and hard, will not uncommonly weigh from two to three pounds. Each of the scales terminates in a curious curved point.

Strangely enough, in spite of the size of its cones Coulter's pine is not by any means the largest of the fir trees. Normally it grows from 50 to 60 feet in height, although very old examples may be 10 feet higher. The foliage of the tree is of a beautiful bluish shade, and the branches are produced in a very symmetrical manner. Luckily, it is said that the cones rarely fall from the boughs, and old trees are often thickly covered with them.

Fish Can Live on Land

The mud springing fishes of the tropical waters of Africa, Asia and Australia prefer to seek their food out of the water. They live like frogs on marshy or muddy ground among the mangrove swamps or along the shore between tide marks. Sometimes with the aid of their tail and ventral fins and clever bending of the body they clamber up stems and slide along branches. When discovered or disturbed they drop back from the branches, several feet above, into the mud below and are said to remain out of the water for hours together.—Kansas City Times.

Market for Fruit And Vegetables

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Western New York domestic white cabbage has commenced to arrive in carlots. The quality and condition of the cabbage offered today was considered excellent and jobbed out from cars slowly around $25.00 per ton for bulk stock. Nearby growers wholesaled their white cabbage from wagons at 6@8c per head.

As result of the limited supply of onions available from Orange county, New York, higher prices were obtained with the market stronger, particularly on large well-matured onions of either the red or yellow variety. Transactions for hundred pound sacks of yellow were made mainly at 2.25@2.50, occasionally slightly higher and lower. Reds realized chiefly 1.75@2.00.

Most of the supply of up-state peas was unattractive in quality and condition and low prices again prevailed. Fancy peas wholesaled at 2.50@3.50 per bushed basket while poor sold down to 1.00. Colorado green peas packed in cates holding approximately 45 pounds peddled out from 5.50@7.00, principally around 6.50.

The demand continued brisk for big Boston lettuce of fancy quality and the market held strong. On the other hand poor stock sold less freely and values averaged a shade lower. Crates of two dozen heads from western New York ranged from 150@250, Oswego county from 50@250, mostly around 125@200, and Orange county from 50@125. Western iceberg type in crates of three and four dozen heads brought 400@500 for the best and 150@350 for the ordinary to poor.

Hudson valley basket apples of large size and fancy quality met a prompt outlet at well sustained prices in a firm market. Inferior and small fruit, however, was practically neglected. Grade A 2¼@2½ inch red varieties jobbed out from 125@250 per bushel basket and green varieties from 125@200.

The market situation for Hudson river Clapp's favorite pears was without important change. The best large offerings realized 225@250 per bushel basket, one lot extra large 275, and small brought 175@200. California Bartletts showed a downward trend. Arrivals were liberal, fancy green stock sold at 290@335 per box, extra fancy higher and ripe fruit lower.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Price movements again lacked uniformity in today's stock market, persistent liquidation of several of the standard industrials being offset by brisk action of a number of specialties and rails. With call money reported to be available in the "outside market" as low as 4¼ per cent, as against the official renewal rate of 4½ and business reports in the main favorable, pools resumed operations in a wide assortment of issues.

Chesapeake and Ohio led the advance in the rail group by crossing 154 to a new record price. Buying of this issue was accompanied by reports that minority stockholders, who are opposing the Van Sweringen merger plan, are demanding a price of over $200 a share for their stock, or a 12 per cent dividend guarantee, basing their claims on the high earning capacity of the road which is expected to show $25 or more a share this year. Missouri Pacific broke through to a new peak for the year and substantial gains were recorded by a number of other class 1 carriers.

Such recent favorites as United States Steel common, General Motors, Dupont and United States Industrial Alcohol appeared to be in large supply on every rally but the reactionary tendency in these issues did not halt constructive operations elsewhere. Oils pointed upward despite reports of an easier wholesale gasoline market in the middle west and a cut in certain grades of Texas crude prices. General Asphalt common and preferred touched new 1926 highs.

The demand for railroad equipment shares reflected the large inquiries now being put out by some of the large railroads, New York Air Brake being elevated to a new 1926 peak price. Merchandising issues responded to reports of a marked improvement in the mail order and retail trade.

Leuck Ordered to Clean Up Canton

Assistant District Attorney Will Co-operate With Canton Officials to That End—Bernsteen Busy Questioning Former Police Prosecutor.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 19 (AP).—With investigation of liquor and narcotic conditions in Canton taking precedence with Federal authorities over the probe into the killing of Don R. Mellett, publisher, District Attorney A. E. Bernsteen today ordered his assistant, Howell Leuck, to "cleanup Canton." At the same time he questioned Norman E. Clark, Canton attorney, arrested for violation of the Federal prohibition law.

New warrants in the case depend, Bernsteen indicated, upon his success in obtaining new information from Clark, who was implicated by Louis Mazer. The latter charged Clark had, while police prosecutor, received bribes, signed fictitious bonds for members of the underworld and had on several occasions received liquor from Mazer. Mazer is held on a liquor charge and a murder warrant at Canton for him has been issued.

Bernsteen to Quit Case.

After questioning Clark, Bernsteen plans to withdraw entirely from the inquiry. He intends to depart for Canada on a fishing trip Friday.

Federal authorities, through Leuck, are concerned primarily with vice conditions in Canton, while Canton investigators are proceeding on the murder case. The latter will be aided with any information uncovered by Leuck which touches the Mellett angle of the case.

Clark's arrest followed his long session with the district attorney yesterday, in which he was confronted with Mazer's accusations.

"Clark knows a great deal and can tell us much about conditions in Canton, if he only will," Bernsteen said. "I talked with him yesterday and I am satisfied he will talk."

Roach To Stay In Canton.

Joseph R. Roach, Chicago "cleanup" attorney, is expected to remain in Canton from now on, centering his activities on finding the slayer of Mellett.

Mazer, in an alleged statement, is understood to have implicated other Canton officials in vice activities. A judge and a detective were said to be among those mentioned by the man killing Mellett.

While Bernsteen was closeted with Clark, Leuck was on his way to Canton with instructions to cooperate fully with the proper local authorities.

Guard Must Stay In 12 Mile Zone

United States Circuit Court of Appeals Holds That Search and Seizure Must Take Place Within Twelve Mile Zone—Holdings Contrary to New York Circuit Court Decision.

Boston, Aug. 19 (AP).—The "twelve mile limit" is still the margin of the coast guards right to search and seize, the United States circuit court of appeals held here today in a majority opinion on the case of James W. Lee of Gloucester.

Judges George H. Bingham of Manchester, N. H., and Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, Me., delivered the opinion.

Judge George W. Anderson, of Boston, in dissenting, held with the previous finding of the second (New York) circuit court, that the right of search and seizure of American craft extends to any part of the sea.

Lee was captured in his motor boat laden with a quantity of liquor said to have been received from the French schooner L'Homme on February 15, 1925, about 24 miles off Boston light. His conviction in the United States district court here was followed by exceptions to the court of appeals.

Because of the difference of findings of the two circuit courts, United States Assistant District Attorney George R. Farnum declared that he would seek either a final decision from the supreme court of definitive explanation from Congress.

COTTON MILL WORKERS STRIKE IN RHODE ISLAND

Manville, R. I., Aug 19 (AP).—The cotton mills of the Manville Jenckes Company here were shut down today as a result of a strike declared last night by workers. Only a few of the 1,700 workers normally employed at the mill appeared at the gates this morning and when other employes failed to report they did not go in. The union had protested against the hiring of four non-union loom fixers to fill vacancies and a report that the working week was to be lengthened. Company officials have denied the latter report.

Many Sires Are Killed Too Soon

Bulls Sent to Butcher Before Their Full Usefulness Is Known.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

What becomes of the bulls that head the average cow-testing association herds? Are the good ones recognized and kept in service, or are they unwittingly sent to the butcher before they have completed their full period of usefulness? Some idea as to the tendency in the disposal of the pure-bred sires in our dairy herds may be had from the results of a recent study made by the bureau of dairying, United States Department of Agriculture.

Proved Sires in Aged Class.

The bureau had previously gathered a list of 56 pure-bred sires, and ascertained their transmitting ability by comparing the records of their daughters with the record of the dams. Naturally these proved sires were in the aged class by the time their value could be determined in this way. Nevertheless, it was desirable to know which were still in service. Inquiry brought information about 22 of them. Of this number only five are alive and in service today. These are all good sires as evidenced by their 31 daughters, whose production is better than their dams by 17 per cent in milk and 23 per cent in butterfat. The other 17 were slaughtered for various reasons.

Eleven of the seventeen slaughtered bulls were good. Their 67 daughters showed an increase over their dams of 22 per cent in milk and 20 per cent in butter fat. Only 2 of them were slaughtered because of sterility, while 9 went to the butcher for other reasons such as unrecognized value, unruliness, and a need for new blood. Six of the 17 bulls were poor. Of these, 2 were slaughtered because of sterility, 1 died, and 3 were killed for beef. Perhaps it was recognized that the last 3 were inferior, and for that reason were discarded.

Value Recognized.

While this is a very small number from which to draw definite conclusions it is evident that the value of some of the good sires was recognized, which accounts for the 5 that are still in service. Perhaps some of the poor sires were also recognized. The unfortunate part is that in the weeding-out process, if such practice existed, 11 out of the 17 dead sires were outstanding from the standpoint of transmitting production to their offspring. Some means must be found to keep the bulls until the records of their daughters prove them either good or otherwise.

Much Improvement Is Made by Poultry Raisers

Much improvement has been made along many lines in the poultry business during the last few years, but the work which has been done by the rank and file of producers to improve sanitary conditions is undoubtedly the most important.

During the last two years there has been more loss from disease by the produce houses than previously. This was especially true two years ago. Last year these men handled the birds in a more sanitary manner and the losses diminished. Farmers appreciate that many of the diseases that cause loss on the farm and at produce houses may be eliminated by improved sanitary conditions.

The practice of raising chicks on fresh ground has spread rapidly. This movement is of prime importance. Worms, lice, mites, coccidiosis and tuberculosis are spread by the older fowls and infected premises to young chicks.

FARM FACTS

Change the water occasionally in the tractor radiator.

An average of the figures indicates that farmers are using appreciably higher protein feeds than they were five years ago.

• • •

Gather the eggs at least every day and better twice a day during the hot weather. Keep them in a dry, cool, well-ventilated place.

• • •

Culling costs about seven cents for each nonproducing hen removed from laying flocks during the past year. Can you afford to do without it?

Any time is a good time to kill burdocks. Cut them below the crown with a sharp spade. This will prevent future sprouts coming from the same root.

• • •

On short pastures the dairy cow does not get enough feed for both maintenance and milk production. Grain must be fed in addition to keep up the milk flow.

Good pasture for growing pigs, brood sows, and all other classes of hogs is so valuable that it often makes the difference between profit and loss in the hog business.

Blue ointment mixed with an equal part of grease or lard will get rid of lice on chickens if an amount about the size of a pea is rubbed into the feathers just below the vent, poultry specialists of the Pennsylvania State college say

The party were brought to the city hall by Norman Bayard of Glasco in his automobile. Those in the party were Warren Robinson, Alice May Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cornish, all of 15 West Strand; Samuel Lucas of Glasco, Leo Foster and Daisy Campbell of New York. Only Robinson, Thomas Cornish and Alice May Taylor were arrested.

Kenneth Hendricks of 147 O'Neil street was arrested Wednesday by Acting Sergeant Fout on a warrant obtained by Hendricks's wife who resides at 29 East Pierpont street. The charge was non-support. The case was held open.

Israel Horton received a suspended sentence. He was picked up on Broadway Wednesday charged with public intoxication.

Lillian Fine, a tourist from New Jersey, was fined $10 for speeding.

Will Try to Keep Booze in Canada

Paul Smith's N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—A further tightening of prohibition enforcement machinery along the Canadian border by joint action of Canada and the United States is expected to be proposed by the Washington government at an early date.

Indications were given in official circles here today that a conference probably would be sought between Canadian officials at Ottawa and Assistant Secretary Lincoln C. Andrews of the American treasury department, in charge of prohibition enforcement, to see if joint action could be agreed upon in an administrative way for tightening the border against smugglers.

In general the object sought would be similar to those which recently occupied the assistant secretary in his conference in London with English officials on the rum running problem.

While Secretary Kellogg of the State Department said here today that he had given no consideration to the question and had not discussed it with President Coolidge, it "would be the natural thing" for him some time after his return to Washington to take up the possibility of such a conference with the British ambassador and see if one could be arranged.

FORESTS CONTRIBUTE MORE WATER VAPOR THAN LAKES

Delegates to International Congress of Plant Sciences Are Told.

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—Forests contribute more water vapor to the air than lakes and streams and consequently are the actual rain producing section of a continent, Raphael Zon, of the United States Forest Service, St. Paul, Minn., told the Forestry Section of the International Congress of Plant Sciences here today.

Modern studies of the circulation of water in the atmosphere have tended to upset the old theory that wind carried vapor from the oceans over the continent, where it condensed in the form of rain or snow, Mr. Zon declared. It is now believed, he added, that the oceans contribute only two-ninths of the precipitation, and that the remaining seven ninths is delivered from evaporation from the land itself.

Measurements of evaporation, he explained, has shown that lakes and streams contribute less vapor in the air than bare moist soils; that bare moist soils contribute less than land covered with grass and crops; and that of all vegetative coverings, a dense forest contributes most vapor.

Mexican Busine Anxious for Pea

Business Interests Want Relig Controversy to End—Cath Episcopate Address Direct P tion to Calles Asking Him Modify Present Regulations.

Mexico City, Aug. 19 (AP).—Me can business men—themselves m ly Roman Catholics—have propo to the government and the Cath Episcopate that a conference be h for the adjustment of the pres religious controversy.

At the same time the Episcope for the first time since the religi difficulties arose, if not the first ti in Mexican history, has addressed direct petition to President Call who has frequently declared he w never withdraw the present regul tions. This letter asks him to su pend the regulations, to give t church its "freedom," and to modi the religious clauses of the const tution radically, declaring that on thus can be settled the old religio struggle which has hurt Mexico much.

No Word From President.

The president's office so far h declined official comment on the proposals for peace, but sources clo to the government express the ce tainty that President Calles will n alter his past attitude.

President Calles has previous declared that the only solution the controversy is for the Cathol Church to obey the Constitution a the laws. Church dignitaries, how ever, say that the church cannot li under such regulations. Thus m observers feel that the Episcopate letter will not alter the fundamen deadlock.

Freezing Keeps Cherries for Pies

Sodus, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—The frosts and low temperatures so greatly feared by small-fruit growers are being used to good advantage this season when applied artificially to "cold pack" the pick of cherries destined to reach the home table in the "great American pie."

While sub-freezing temperatures are more than likely to damage the crop on the trees, once the fruit is pitted, sugared and packed away in barrels and cans, the chill has been found to act as an excellent preservative. Consequently the pie cherries are delivered to piemakers in the larger cities of the East in a frozen condition, but quit their chilled existence virtually as whole, as juicy and as delicious as when they left the tree.

The "cold pack" process, something of a recent development in the canning industry, is used to preserve for use in pies on a million tables the 1,300 tons of cherries grown and packed annually on one farm alone in this vicinity. Thirty thousand cherry trees comprising a part of the 56,000 tree small-fruit orchard on the 225 acres of the Sodus Fruit Farm are stripped of their red globules by some 250 high school and college girls who yearly go to "cherry picking camp" for the purpose.

The date for beginning the picking process must first be selected with care, for only at a certain time, growers have found, does the natural juices of the tree fill each cherry to capacity and seal the cavity left by separation from the stem in the picking. Once picked the cherries are hastened by mechanical conveyors from tree to packing shed, and here are dumped into the huge concrete vats filled with cold water for preliminary washing and for chilling to remove the sun heat, a temperature found to be comparatively high when produced by the combined warmth of 25 tons of cherries.

A trip through the washing machine ends in a flow on a moving belt of millions of glistening red cherries across the sorting and inspection table, and a fall in rippling cascades of red into the belt conveyor leading to the pitting machines. Eight huge pitters cut the tender skins with their star-shaped knives and push out the pits, and then the cherries are well on their way to the ultimate pie.

From the pitters they drop into 30-pound tin cans, or into barrels, a supply of dextrose sugar drops down to cover and preserve them, the cantops, or barrel-covers are put in place and the containers are sent on to the storage barns. By truck-load they move from packing shed to the cold storage bins, where for four days, in the case of the 30-pound cans, and 10 days, for the barrels, they are subjected to a temperature of 15 degrees above zero. Thus thoroughly chilled and frozen they are ready for the market, and are shipped in iced cars to New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Cleveland and other big cities of the East. Kept in the chilled state until the time comes for them to become the ingredient of countless pies and other delicacies, the cherries emerge, with the exception of the pits, virtually unchanged as to weight, shape, color, size and quality.

EXHIBIT WILL SHOW BREEDING OF GRAIN.

The theme of one of the exhibits at the state fair at Syracuse, August 30 to September 4, will be "varieties and strains of grains and forage crops best adapted to New York agriculture." This exhibit is being arranged by the department of plant breeding at the state college of agriculture at Ithaca.

Good varieties are the outcome of careful breeding or selection, the department says. In this connection, charts showing the effect of selection in potatoes will be shown. Charts will also show the comparative merits of different recommended grain varieties as contrasted with some of the common commercial sorts.

Included in the exhibit will be one-bushel samples of wheat, oats, rye, and barley. Unthreshed samples of each grain will be shown also. The display of corn, which will be limited because of the early date of the fair, will consist of ten ear samples of nine varieties of silage and grain types.

The importance of clean seed will be shown by a seed cleaning machine which will also show the methods of getting rid of impurities in seed.

Tagging Major League Bases

(By The Associated Press.)

Max Carey, university bred centerfielder, recently deposed as captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates, may become manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1927.

In no other way can Brooklyn's claim of the expensive gardener, allowed by the Pirates yesterday, be explained. The club already boasts Dazzy Vance and Zach Wheat, two high salaried performers.

Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Dodgers, who also is president of the club, tried a year ago to leave the bench for executive duties and he placed Wheat in charge of the team. A great slugger and fielder, Wheat failed to satisfy the team's followers as manager. Carey, considering the circumstances undoubtedly will make up his mind to report to Brooklyn.

The Pirates went into action yesterday for the first time since Carey, Carson Bigbee and the veteran Babe Adams were punished for a reported effort to oust Fred Clarke, assistant manager, from the bench. They managed an even break with Boston, winning the first, 4 to 1, through Ray Kremer's excellent pitching, and losing the second 4 to 3.

The St. Louis Cardinals remained a half game behind in the standing by turning back Brooklyn, 6 to 2, supporting Reinhart's hurling with opportune batting. Bob O'Farrell registered a homer and Jim Bottomley hit safely in his three appearances, two of his blows being doubles. Billy Southworth produced a double and single.

Jakie May gave Cincinnati a 3 to 0 victory over Philadelphia, keeping nine hits well scattered. This exhibition kept the Reds within striking distance of the leaders.

Boston took its fourth straight from St. Louis in the only American League game played, 4 to 2, Ruffing permitting only five hits. Bill Jacobson hit the ball out of the park in the first inning.

Greb Will Try to Regain His Title

Former Middleweight Boxing Champion Will Try and Dethrone Tiger Flowers Tonight—Flowers Lived Up to His Promise.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Tiger Flowers, Atlanta negro, tonight keeps a promise he made when he won the middleweight boxing championship from Harry Greb of Pittsburgh in Madison Square Garden last February—a chance to win back the crown.

Moreover, Flowers's manager says that if the champion retains his title he will go to Europe and attempt to swim the English Channel. The negro has something of a reputation in the water.

Since winning the crown the Atlantan has been out of his class most of the time, but has encountered many men in all sections of the country without damage. Greb, who used to fight about every week, has given his entire attention to preparation for his revenge.

Stone Ridge Won Tug of War

The "tug of war" was very interesting and was won by the Stone Ridge Grange, No. 931, team. The huskies that composed the winning team were: H. E. Van Winkle, L. Hasbrouck, P. Schoonmaker, E. Muller, F. Davenport, W. Neff, T. Degraw, V. Bogart, C. Cole and M. Hardenberg. I Oliver was the captain of the team and much of the success of the winners was due to his coaching and encouraging words. The losing team was made up of the strong men from several Granges as it was impossible for the team that was to oppose the Stone Ridge men to get to Forsyth Park on account of the wet weather. The other "tug of war" contests that were scheduled for the picnic had to be postponed for the same reason.

More Prizes for Horses at Picnic

Besides the prizes for the finest team of draft horses and their driver—John W. Rose, driver for the Everett & Treadwell winning team, also being awarded $5 in gold—there were silver cups offered as first and second prizes for the finest horses and their riders, and the winners were as follows: First prize, De Lancey A. DeGraff and his horse, Sir Thomas; second prize, Clifford Anderson and his horse, Head Light.

Interesting Bouts At Fair Grounds

Carpino Knocks Out Colored Opponent in Third Round—Walcott Scores Technical Knock Out Over Newburgh Man—Bouts Late in Starting.

In the most interesting bout of the evening at the Fair Grounds smoker Wednesday evening Johnny Carpino of this city knocked out Jewett Strother, a colored boxer, in the third round of a scheduled six round bout. Carpino weighed in at 138 while Strother tipped the scales at 134.

At the opening of the fracas Strother strutted around like a real boxer and looked very promising. His excellent poise was somewhat damaged by Carpino, however, at the beginning of the first round with a terrific blow to the body. This seemed to take all the heart out of the boy and once during the round he was knocked out of the ring and at another time he was floored. In the second round Strother landed a few hard blows to Carpino's head and tried to come back but he was weakening at every moment. He lasted until the third round when another stiff body blow by Carpino sent him to the canvas for the count of ten.

Walcott Didn't Appear.

The bout that was to have been the feature of the evening was not staged as Walcott, the man that was to fight Vince Hart, did not appear to go through with the exhibition. Hart was in fine shape and all angles pointed to a win for the East Kingston lad had the colored boy made his appearance at the grounds.

However, a man from Newburgh, by the name of Ferguson, volunteered to go on with Hart and the bout was scheduled for four rounds. Both of the fighters sparred for a few seconds and then the Newburgh man hit his opponent several times. This was too much for Hart and he immediately sent over a couple of rough ones that sent his man to the canvas. This feat was accomplished thrice during the round and the referee stopped the fight. Hart was given credit for a technical knockout.

Bell Saves Lawrence.

The show was opened by Lawrence of Highland and Costello of Port Ewen, two lightweights. The boys started with jabs and clinches and kept pretty even until the last round when Costello went to work on his man and landed a number of effective punches. Lawrence was leaning on the ropes in a dazed condition and a knockout was anticipated by the spectators but the bell saved him.

Willie James of Newburgh, who weighed 120 and Frank Minerva, 118, of New Paltz put on the next affair which was rather fast due to the fact that Minerva was quite some smaller than his opponent and could duck James's blows very effectively. No damaging blows were struck in this bout and it ended with both boys about even.

Battle Royal Interesting.

The battle royal was rather interesting as the contestants were of various sizes. Two men went to the canvas in this melee and the rest of the losers voluntarily gave up. Andy Williams the smallest of the battlers, won the contest.

Jupiter Pluvius banned the game between the Colonials and the Beckwiths, that was to have been played Wednesday afternoon at the Fair Grounds and many thought that the smoker would also be postponed but the weather signs looked rather promising in the evening and the program was carried out. The grounds were rather wet as were the ringside seats and for this reason the covered grandstand was sought by most of the fans. The bouts were tardy in getting started due to the fact that the boxers from down the river were late.

Pitching Champ Showed Skill

"Putt" Mossman the horse shoe pitching champion from Iowa surely did exhibit his skill at the picnic on Wednesday afternoon. He was featured at the end of the program and delighted all who stayed to witness the event. The 19-year-old expert made 73 ringers out of 82 tries and showed that he was master of the game by tossing the shoes through hoops, pitching with a blanket obstructing the view and by lighting matches with the horse shoes.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

From the presenting by WGY of "Horses" and "Animal Crackers" both in subdued, revised and simplified versions with the changes greatly to the detriment of the original pep of these noble examples of music, right on until long past the time when everybody should have been asleep, reception was of the mid-winter variety.

Even WRNY got back in its place and did not put a squeal in WGY.

The mysterious squeal in WTAM continued and increased to two squeals, one just below and the other just above WTAM.

All Chicago stations were good, with WLS the best. WLW and WMAC were also especially good.

But a new crop of bloopers seems to have been raised. Probably some ingenious youth has assembled some parts purchased on the five cent side of a five and ten cent store, hooked on a few hundred feet of wire and started in to be a second Edison.

Plans Made for Pro Football

Levi Hasbrouck Elected Temporary Captain and Manager at Meeting of Those Interested in Kingston's Football Team—Twelve Men Present at Meeting.

Levi Hasbrouck was elected captain and manager of Kingston's football team at a meeting of those interested in the formation of a team at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening. He will look after the team until the season gets under way after which a permanent manager will be chosen.

The first practice session for the team will be held tonight at the Athletic Field at 6:30. About fifteen men are expected to turn out for the initial drill. According to present plans Kingston's first game will be played at home on September 19 with Newburgh furnishing the opposition.

Those who were present at Wednesday night's meeting were Hasbrouck, Messinger, Len O'Reilly, Mc Lane, Hoffman, and Vogt, all former members of the Kingston High School teams. In addition to these there were J. Circoni, who played with the Manual Training High School and the Newport Naval Training Station, and William Clark, a former player on the Binghamton Central High School team. Ferdie Allen, who played with Columbia, and Ted Karis, a member of a Schenectady semi-pro team, are both expected to sign up with the locals. Both of these men are now playing with the Colonial baseball club.

Children's Games At County Picnic

C. E. Wonderly had charge of the children's games and contests which were given at the Ulster County Picnic Wednesday afternoon. Rain or no rain, the kiddies proved to be quite as good sports as their elders and several games and stunts were put over by them. Unfortunately no record of the names of the three boys and the three girls who successfully won the dipper race was kept, that being the first entry for the children. In the "milk bottle" contest, Norman Markle won the first prize for boys—no record of the second and third prize winners: Anna Amarello won the first; Evelyn Douglas, the second; and Harriet Dietz, the third for girls.

The balanced beam prize went to the following boys: John Garrison, first; George Garrison, second; Kenneth Saunders, third; and the prizes for the girls for the same contest were won by Eva Clinton, first; Estelle Favermen, second; Barbara Buley, third.

As it had come on to rain again, apparently no girls entered the "paper bag race", and the following boys won the prizes: Robert Flynn, first prize; James McElwood, second; Hugo Schroeder, third.

None but boys entered the wheelbarrow race, and the prize-winning lads of that contest were: Roger Smith, first prize; James Brett, second prize; Lewis Hicks, third prize.

The last children's event was that of climbing a greased pole, and in this case it was a wet greased pole at that. Fastened quite securely to the top of the pole was a small package, containing a boy's good watch. There were several contestants, and finally one little lad not only climbed the pole but unfastened the package, winning the watch. Unfortunately his name was not recorded, but if that lad will telephone The Freeman, 2200, asking for the editorial room, and will then tell his name and the fact that he won the watch, his name will be published.

Buffalo Group Buys Huge Game Preserve

Marquette, Mich.—Sportsmen of Buffalo, N. Y., have bought 25,585 acres of land on the south shore of Lake Superior, in Chippewa county, which they will use as a private game preserve.

The sportsmen have formed a club and given it the name of "Deer Haven." Membership will be limited to about 200. Most of them will be Buffalo men. Applications for membership have also been received from sportsmen in Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland.

A strong protest was entered when the Hamilton club, Chicago, bought 40,000 acres for a game preserve. The new acquisition is not far from that tract and is also near the private hunting estate of the Dodge and Graham families, Detroit.

Steam Shovel Digs Up Indian Skulls in Gotham

New York.—Two skulls, a couple of thigh bones and several ribs were dipped up by a steam shovel excavating near Two Hundred Fourth street. Tony Durona, who is as deft with a steam shovel as an expert angler with a four-ounce rod and has dug up many a relic without a qualm, yelled for the police.

Detectives notified Reginald Pelham Bolton, vice president of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation society. They were the skulls of Indians, said Mr. Bolton, who had had a village in that vicinity in 1600.

By that time it was 5 o'clock, which suited Tony Durona very well, as he had caught a glimpse of several more skulls in the excavation and was in no hurry to resume his shoveling.

Latest in Bangs

London.—Where there are women there are styles. The latest thing in bangs for the London shingled girl is the five-point fringe. The middle Vandyke point reaches the bridge of the nose and two points in each side edge down to the eyebrows.

Asbury Team Are Now Champions

Marlborough Defeated in Finals in Horseshoe Pitching Contest for County Championship at County Picnic Wednesday by Asbury Team.

The horseshoe pitching contests at the Ulster county picnic on Wednesday proved of very much interest. Every team was out for the cup and each player strove to exhibit the best brand of playing that he knew. The famous Marlborough team showed up well and waded through the contest to the final game. Rare Fruit

The mangosteen can only be grown where the temperature never drops below 25 degrees above zero. It is the size of a mandarin orange, deep purple externally, with a thick, woody rind. Within are several segments of snow-white pulp of extremely delicate flavor. Because of its great delicacy and the difficulty of transporting it long distances, Queen Victoria, it is said, once offered a handsome reward to the first man who succeeded in placing a dish of mangosteens on her table at Buckingham palace, but the reward was never won.

Says Saxophone Keeps Youth From Crime

Elkhart, Ind.—Young America is safely blowing away its excessive and sometimes dangerous energy through the saxophone, the slide trombone and similar instruments, in the opinion of C. D. Greenleaf of Elkhart, president of the National Association of Band Instrument Manufacturers.

"It is a serious problem with many parents in these days to find wholesome methods of recreation for their children, and the band and orchestra furnish one solution," Mr. Greenleaf said.

"They furnish an ideal outlet for energies of the 'gang,' which might otherwise be expressed in ways not nearly so healthful. The growing interest in music among our young people will, in my judgment, in a few years make America a musical nation."

Atlas Supporting Earth

That the earth is supposed to be carried by Atlas is merely an old legend in classical mythology. Atlas, the brother of Prometheus, led the revolt against the gods, for which he was condemned by Zeus to bear the heavens upon his shoulders. The story was invented by the Greeks to explain what holds the earth up.

A delicious treat for that "hurry-up" Sunday supper

"HURRY-UP" because the maid's out. Or because you had your elaborate dinner in the middle of the day. Or because it is too hot to eat a big meal.

But it need not be an ordinary Sunday supper just because you don't feel like cooking. Lift it above the level of "just another meal" by serving "Canada Dry." This fine old ginger ale is a pleasant change from the usual routine, and your family and guests will appreciate it.

But be sure you get "Canada Dry." Cheap ginger ales will not bring you the same refreshment.

Nine times out of ten they aren't real ginger ales at all, but are made with capsicum, or plain red pepper. And you don't want that.

Purity is the first essential in every beverage and you get no substitutes in "Canada Dry."

Try this some day soon: Toasted cheese sandwiches and "Canada Dry." It's a real treat.

Special Hostess Package

The most convenient way of buying "Canada Dry." Ideal for home use. Twelve bottles in a substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy for your dinners at home or when friends drop in unexpectedly. This Hostess Package is sold by all "Canada Dry" dealers.

'our Sporting Monarchs Must Defend Titles

abe Ruth's Crown Appears to Be Intact but Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Bill Tilden and Jack Dempsey Still Have to Face Crucial Tests.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Five onarchs of sport today confront e closing challenges of the outdoor eason with a powerful battery of uns which has blasted away all oposition on four battle fields in ars gone by.

At least one of the quintet appears ufficiently fortified to remove his rown from the range of rivals. ith 39 home runs to his credit, abe Ruth's title as the slugging king of the diamond seems ecure. But Walter Hagen, obby Jones, Bill Tilden and Jack empsey still have to face the crucial ests of their right to rule for another year.

Jones Should Win Again.

Next to Ruth, of the "big five", ones seems most likely to ward off e thrusts of foes in the amateur olf championship. The brilliant tlanta golfer, who already has annexed the British and American open itles, has soared to remarkable eights this year. Bobby appears nbeatable and the burden of his deense was lightened considerably esterday by definite announcement at Jess Sweetser, American winner f the British amateur crown, would e prevented by ill health from oposing Bobby's march to a third raight championship.

Hagen Ready for Conflict.

Walter Hagen, seeking to retain is professional links title, has indiated his readiness for the conflict y an amazing string of victories hich rival the achievements of ones. Outstanding among them ave been decisive match triumphs ver Jones and Abe Mitchell, and the inning of the eastern open championship with a remarkable total of 75 for 72 holes.

Tilden's Reign Threatened.

Tilden's attempt to extend his eign at the net to seven consecutive ears will be contested stubbornly by hree stars from France in addition o a strong band of American conenders. The racquets of Rene Laoste, Jean Borotra and Henri ochet, here in quest of the Davis up as well as the national sceptre f Tilden, throw a shadow across the ath of the tall Philadelphian which t this time seems more menacing han the thrusts of Vincent Richards, illiam M. Johnston and other stars f the American court.

Dempsey Has Many Foes.

An army of foes has risen to worry e heavyweight champion. Jack empsey not only faces a dangerous hallenger in Gene Tunney but also the target of litigation. His reuilt nose has given rise to doubt ver his ability to withstand punishent. And, topping these hazards, e is confronted with the task of reaining championship form after an bsence of three years from the ring —a retirement too long, in the opinon of many critics, to bring him ack to the peak of his former hiting power.

Judge Kenesaw M. Landis Lauds New League Rule

The Western league's new rookie rule requiring at least five players on each team who have not had 20 games of baseball experience of Class A rating has been lauded by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, national baseball commissioner.

"The young fellows create more interest and improve the game generally," Judge Landis declared. "The fans always are for the new player, for he is a willing worker, full of fight and pep.

"These young players, practically fresh from the sand lots, also make more and better minor league baseball possible. Especially is this true in leagues below Class A rating, for these teams, usually supported by a civic movement, seldom are self-supporting. The attendance will not pay expenses. Thus the good fellows of the town must make up the deficit. But if the club can sell a young player or two each season the monetary strain is alleviated."

Manager John J. McGraw Owns a Caustic Tongue

John McGraw is possessed of a very caustic tongue and on occasion he uses it. Recently he observed a keen looking gentleman in one of the field boxes, staring intently at one of the rookies. This youngster had recently been unfortunate enough to muss up an easy play and was not in highest favor with his boss.

"What," asked Mac petulantly of Paul Florence, his Germantown catcher, "is that bloke doing, looking at the kid like that?"

"Don't know," answered Paul, "but that man is Professor So-So. He's a mind reader."

"Yeh?" McGraw pondered this for a moment, then: "He must be on his vacation now."

Few Spitball Pitchers Remain in Fast Company

The "spitters" are drying up or drying out. Only nine of the galaxy of moist ball dispensers who graced the major leagues a few years ago are still under the big tent.

When the spitter was abolished some seventeen twirlers were allowed special dispensation to continue their nefarious work, but recruits were barred. Those now remaining in major company are Burleigh Grimes, Stanley Coveleski, Faber, Joe Quinn, Hub Leonard, Shocker, Alan Sothoron, Mitchell and Russell.

Those who have passed out of the big show since 1920 are Ray Caldwell, Al Ayers, Dick Rudolph, Marvin Goodwin, Ray Fisher, Bill Doak and Phil Douglas.

To bolster the pitching staff, the Washington American club has signed Jimmy Uchrinsko, right-hander with a semi-pro club at McKeesport, Pa.

Horace McBride of the Massillon team of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Baseball league has been sold to the Washington American League Baseball club.

Dempsey to Fight In Philadelphia

Champion Will Meet Tunney in Sesquicentennial Stadium on September 23—Pennsylvania Officials Are All Agreeable—Bout Scheduled for Ten Rounds to a Decision.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Philadelphia apparently has failed in efforts to gain a world's series for its sesquicentennial celebration, but it has obtained the heavyweight championship boxing bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney.

Thereby New York joins Chicago as supporter of lost causes, for Promoter Tex Rickard made this decision last night after encountering rebuff in both cities. In Chicago threatened court actions caused him to step out and in New York his refusal to summon the state license committee into court brought about the change of front.

Dempsey and Tunney, according to the latest announcement, will meet in a ten round contest to a judge's decision at the sesquicentennial Stadium on Thursday, September 23, and the seating capacity will be in the vicinity of 150,000 with prices ranging from $5.00 to $30.00.

This time it would seem that Rickard is about to meet with success in his efforts, for the battle has received the approval of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission, Governor Pinchot and Mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia.

Checks to the amount of $100,000 have been deposited by Rickard and the Pennsylvania commission and the sesquicentennial authorities to guarantee good faith.

"I did not want to have the New York State Athletic Commission subjected to legal attack in connection with the issuance of a license to Dempsey," Rickard said. "Boxing has been good to me and I wanted to do nothing that might injure the sport in this state.

"I don't believe the New York officials will interfere, as the commission has accepted the bout and two members of the body, George E. Brower and William J. Muldoon, did everything they could to have the contest in New York."

Immediately after announcing the new site the promoter ordered both boxers to desert their present training quarters and found them willing.

"I am ready to move any time," Dempsey said, "and from now until the time I lose the title I will fight elsewhere than in New York state.

Both Dempsey and Tunney are expected to choose sites within 50 miles of Philadelphia. The champion will move immediately while Tunney expects to select a camp within a week.

The decision came after a day of uncertainty and many conferences. At the home of John Ringling, a Rickard partner at Madison Square Garden, every angle of the Philadelphia situation was discussed with boxing and sesquicentennial officials.

Six Months' Toll Of Auto Accidents

New York State Had 850 Victims in First Six Months of Present Year—In Same Period 27,251 Were Injured in Motor Accidents.

Albany, Aug. 19.—Eight hundred and fifty people were killed in automobile accidents on the highways of New York state in the first six months of the current year according to a statement issued today by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Charles A. Harnett. The number of fatalities was disclosed in a review of statistics gathered in investigating the circumstances surrounding the causes of 23,830 accidents reported to the commissioner as required by law. Unofficial figures for the first six months of 1925 reported 890 deaths during that period. Accidents in which pedestrians were struck by automobiles continue to predominate among the fatalities, for in this manner 552 persons lost their lives, 239 of these being children fourteen years of age and under.

From January 1 to July 1 of 1926, 27,251 persons were injured in automobile accidents and here again pedestrians suffered the largest number of casualties leading with 15,138 injured. Sixty-nine auto drivers were killed when the cars in which they were riding collided with fixed objects such as concrete and iron traffic signals, fire hydrants, poles, and even buildings.

The investigations would indicate that collisions between two or more autos did not result in as large a percentage of deaths as other types of accidents, for only 57 deaths were traced to this cause in a total of 5,311 collisions. Forty-nine deaths occurred in 59 automobile accidents on the railroads of the state, grade crossing accidents invariably resulting in one or more deaths. The percentage in the case of collisions with street cars being very much smaller.

PICNIC AND FIELD DAY AT RIFTON SUCCESSFUL

Rifton August 19.—The picnic and field day held on Saturday August 14, at Dashville Falls dam park under the auspices of the congregation of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, was largely attended and a great success. Much credit is due the ladies for their faithful work and careful planning of the affair as well as to those of the village not identified closely with the church who gave their services so willingly. The athletic events were under the direction of Austin Burns and young men from Mr. Russell's camp, Rosendale. Prizes were given to the successful contestants. Fancy articles were sold and refreshments served. The summer guests were liberal in their patronage and a good sum was realized, to be devoted to church improvements. The Rev. James G. Cameron, in charge, wishes to heartily thank all who helped to make the affair successful.

Introducing

The cab drew up in front of the imposing marble mansion, and he jauntily alighted. Upon his swarthy, bronzed countenance there glowed the sparkle of health, and there was the vigor of youth in his stride. Leisurely climbing the steps, he rang the bell. The door was flung open a few seconds later. "Taxi for Blotzwister," he said.

Fights Army for His Carburetor

uffalo Man, Who Drives Car Between Beirut and Teheran, Becomes Very Much Excited When He Finds His Carburetor Gone.

Teheran, Persia, Aug. 19 (AP).—Yank Lewis of Buffalo is the driver of one of the cars of an American company, which, twice a week, runs automobile convoys between Beirut and Teheran. Yank stands six feet two in his stockinged feet and weighs two hundred and ten pounds. He is just as hard as the steel motor he drives. The American cars park in a camp just outside the city where a regiment or more of the Persian army is quartered.

Returning from the city one evening, Yank went to take a look at his car. He was due to leave for Beirut the next morning and he wanted to see that everything was shipshape.

He found that automobile in a sad mess. One of his lamps had been stolen, the carburetor was missing and one spare tire was gone. Yank made straight for the sentry on duty nearby and asked to know: "Who done this and why didn't you stop it?" The sentry had no satisfactory excuse so Yank swung right and left. The sentry ran, firing his rifle as he went

In a moment the camp was in an uproar. The call to arms was sounded and soldiers, arming themselves hurriedly, ran out of their barracks.

The local manager of the American Transportation Company, who resides nearby, found Yank Lewis, with his back against the wall of one of the barracks, warding off the attack of ten or twelve Persian soldiers, occasionally taking the offensive himself

"Hey, Yank, come out of it! You'll have the whole regiment after you," admonished the manager.

"I don't care a hang," witnesses report Yank as shouting back—although they make it stronger than hang—"if the whole Persian army is after me. I want my carburetor back"

MORAN SCHOOL'S EVIDENCE OF STUDENT-SERVICE

Under the caption of "Making Good in Business," the Moran Business School, Burgevin building, corner Fair and Main streets, has inserted in today's Freeman a partial list of its graduates of this and former years, believing that no more forceful evidence of the efficiency of Moran training could be presented.

The Moran School may be classified as an institution that has "nothing to sell but service;" and, like all other organizations of this type, it must maintain unceasingly a caliber of student-service that will build confidence and attract new business.

The revelers, in costume, will be making their appearance at this time. The stands and booths at which the fakirs, the fortune tellers and the venders will operate will be open. There will be contests, games, athletic events and free dancing.

The camp fire supper is scheduled for 6 o'clock. This is always an attractive sight, the entire clearing being bordered by hundreds of camp fires. Lunches may be prepared over these fires or may be purchased on the grounds.

The big show, consisting of a double bill, "Krazy Kat" directed by Arnold Blanch and "The Birthday of the Infanta" by Oscar Wilde and directed by Harry Gotlieb, will be opened at 8:30 o'clock. There will be a large cast, made up of many of the famous artists of the colony and of the young people of Woodstock society circles and there will be an enlarged orchestra, conducted by Pierre Henrotte, concert master of the Metropolitan.

The Artists' Costume Ball will follow the show, and there will also be another dance for those not in costume. No one will be admitted to the artists' ball, unless in costume.

It is urged that all who attend plan to spend some time on the grounds, instead of getting to the grounds just in time to go to the theatre.

There will be plenty of music. The Anshaw Harmony Girls have been engaged especially for this occasion. The Mink Hollow Musicians, led by Walter Stienhelber will be on hand early and late.

If the day should be rainy, the festival will be held on the next fair day, Sunday excepted.

POPE RECEIVES FAMOUS NORTH POLE FLYER.

Rome, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Pope traveled from the Vatican Wednesday on the wings of imagination when for almost an hour he heard from General Umberto Nobile a detailed story of the flight across the North Pole.

The Pope congratulated the flier upon his achievement and presented to him a gold medal. General Nobile said after the interview that the Pontiff knew and discussed details of Amundsen's previous exploration of which he himself was not aware.

PROOF OF OLD TESTAMENT ACCURACY FOUND IN RUINS

Story of Joshua Supported by Excavations in Biblical City of Kirjath-Sepher.

New York.—Science has unearthed new evidence in support of the Old Testament, and has under scrutiny possible new evidence corroborating the New Testament.

Melvin G. Kyle, president of the Xenia Theological seminary in St. Louis, arrived here from an archeological inspection of the excavated ruins of the Biblical city of Kirjath-Sepher founded by the Canaanites in 2000 B. C. and finally destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar in 600 B. C.

Doctor Kyle declared that successive ages of the city, mentioned in the book of Joshua, and now called Tell-Beit-Mirsam by the Arabs, were traced by layers of ashes from the five times it was burned, and by kitchen utensils and rope-worn well stones, placed one upon another.

The city, which Doctor Kyle estimated to have had a peace time population of 5,000 and a war time population of perhaps 15,000, had underneath it rock-hewn rooms for water, food and war supplies. He estimated that the ruins provided a complete account, in agreement with the Bible, of the Canaanites from 2000 B. C. until the exodus and the city's destruction in 600 B. C. The expedition led by Doctor Kyle, which has employed from sixty-five to eighty-five laborers since excavation began in February, cost but $2,500.

Possible scientific confirmation of the existence of Jesus is sought by Prof. Solomon Zeitlin, it is said in dispatches from Paris, as an incident to examination of a manuscript recently found in Russia. He will go to Russia to study a document said to be a copy in Slavonic of Josephus' "Jewish Wars," presumably written in 80 A. D., in Aramaic.

Extant Slavonic versions of Josephus contain references to Jesus, but their authenticity is questioned by some scientists who believe them to have been inserted by translators.

Scholars hold that if Professor Zeitlin establishes the authenticity of the Russian document, and finds in it a reference to Jesus it will amount to a refutation of claims made in 1906 by the German, Doctor Strauss, that the whole story of Jesus was a myth, as well as claims that the early historian, Josephus, had ignored the existence of Jesus.

It is rather difficult to remove rust from the inside of a bread box. It is advisable to paint it. Two coats of flat white paint should be used with one coat of enamel.

Percy Parker Out of Jail

In Order That he May Earn Money to Pay His Wife—Bennie Akins Pays $50 and Gets Out—New System of Pleas Without Indictment Works Well.

Percy Parker, who was sent to jail by the city court when he failed to provide a bond to secure the payments of $10 a week to his wife and family as directed by the city court, was released from jail Wednesday afternoon by County Judge Joseph M Fowler. Parker was directed by Judge Shufeldt to pay $10 a week to his wife for the support of the family and when he was unable to supply a bond he went to jail. Unable to secure the bond or make the directed payments while in jail, Judge Fowler paroled him to the custody of Probation Officer Service and directed that the weekly payments be made. Failure to make the payment each week will result in a violation of the parole and his arrest. Amos Van Etten, who appeared for Parker, said that the sum directed to be paid by the city court was too much. Judge Fowler however did not think so and allowed the amount to stand at $10.

Parker had a job waiting for him and could go to work immediately according to his counsel.

Bennie Akins, colored, who resides in New York city, entered a plea of guilty by information to the charge of assault, second degree, committed December 13, 1923. District Attorney Traver said that under the circumstances he would accept a plea of guilty to assault, third degree Chris Flanagan appeared for the defendant Judge Fowler imposed a fine of $50 or one day for each $5 of the fine Bennie paid and was released from custody

Court Adjourned Sine Die.

The June term of the county court was adjourned from week to week during the summer in order that defendants held in jail might, if they desired, have their cases disposed of by a new provision of the law which permits a defendant to enter a plea under an information filed with the court instead of waiting for the action of the grand jury.

This summer many have taken advantage of this provision and had their cases disposed of during the time the grand jury and the courts are ordinarily not in session Judge Fowler has thus relieved the September grand jury of much work and also has saved the county considerable in the cost of prosecution. There are but few prisoners in the county jail now waiting the action of the grand jury.

Famous Monastery Closed

General Pangalos, President of the Greek republic, recently signed an order dissolving the famous religious community of eight thousand monks established in a monastery on Mount Athos.

For thousands of years this monastery has withstood every invasion of the Balkans, Turkish rule and the wars between the states. It was conducted under monastic regulations of the greatest severity. Not only was access to the mountain forbidden to women and girls, but even to female animals.

Spanish Motor Highway

A direct motor highway from Madrid to Valencia, Spain, 370 kilometers long and paved with cement to a width of twenty meters, is proposed by a company in Spain, according to Augustus W. Ferrin, consul at Madrid. This highway would cross three provinces and pass through or near a number of cities and towns, of which the most important are Toledo, Aranjuez, Cuenca, Albacete and Chelva, crossing six rivers, whose power would be available for industrial purposes.

More Information

The young idea is still shooting wild, as some answers to recent school examinations show. In response to the question, "What did Wolfe do at Quebec?" one student replied, "The Wolf made war on Little Red Riding Hood." Answers to other questions were, "An Irish bull is a male cow," and "Cereals are films shown at the pictures."

The Sandman Story

INDIAN PIPE FLOWERS

"CHILDREN love us," said one of the members of the Indian Pipe family to Fairy Ybab.

Fairy Ybab had gone out into the woods to practice some new music which she was going to teach to the members of the Fairies' orchestra. She had been singing the tunes to herself as she made them up, trying them over and over again to see where she could make improvements. Then she had stopped to speak to the group of Indian Pipes which she had seen.

Stopped to Speak to the Group of Indian Pipes.

"Yes," the Indian Pipe continued, "we are so different, so unusual, and children like us and they like our interesting name.

"We are fond of the family name ourselves. It's a nice name for a group of plants, we think. It has always been the family name, too. We have lived in these woods many years. And when I say that, you know, I mean our family has lived here. Oh, yes, my great-great-great-grandmother and grandfather used to see Indians coming quietly through the woods. Oh, how quietly they could walk, scarcely rustling the leaves as they moved along.

"We children have been told of all that. And such excitement as there used to be in those old days. Such excitement! You see, we're all brave plants or flowers, or whatever you would call us. Oh, yes! We don't hang onto each other. We don't cling as vines do. Vines haven't half the strength of character we have, though vines have their own sweet, lovely ways.

"I don't want to say anything against vines. Vines are so good about giving shade and they make porches so pretty, and they do a great deal to aid in making the world lovelier than ever. Anything or any number of things doing that should never be criticized. But you see how we are! We're different, that's all.

"We are all solitary, single, alone. Each one of use flowers is by itself. You know how some flowers are clustered together—many little flowers in one group. But each of us has just one flower, standing all by itself.

"You see, too, how we haven't even any leaves with which to shield ourselves. You can always tell us when you see us, for we are so unlike any other plants or ferns. Usually a number of us make our home around a certain part of the woods. We dearly love the woods, and in the woods you should look if you want to find us.

"Yes, each one is by itself. Each one has its own stem, and each one has just one white flower hanging over its stem.

"Many other flowers grow together on a single stem—lots of them to one stem. And we're all white! You'll find no green leaves about us, nor any green or brown stem. Our flowers have little black spots about them, and when the bud of a flower is closed it looks dark at the top. We're brittle, something like some kinds of candy, easy to break off.

"But we're not good to eat. I suppose people thought we looked like an Indian's pipe and so that was why we were named his name. We do look something like a white pipe, it is true.

"Of course we're white, and Indians are always called red men. But if we were just like Indians we wouldn't be called anything else but Indians. We're flowers with many of the same ways as those thrilling red men. And we look like pipes. Oh, we're very proud of the family name!"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

SHOE ON, SHOE OFF

IN SOME sections of the country they say that it is "bad luck" when putting on your shoes and stockings to completely dress one foot before beginning on the other. But in most places the superstition is that bad luck is brought on by having the left foot shod and the right foot bare; though there is a feeling among the superstitious that having one foot shod and one not, should, without reference to right or left, be avoided on general principles, even though right bare and left shod is the most orthodox form of the superstition.

The custom of having one foot bare and one shod at solemn or critical times existed from the dawn of history and many learned men have disputed over its significance. The fighting races of antiquity went, many of them, thus to battle. The oracle warned Pelias, king of Iocius, to beware of the man with his left foot shod and his right foot bare and when Jason appeared thus attired Iocius knew that the "jig was up." On an ancient Greek vase is a picture of a man with his bare right foot on a sacrificial victim, his left foot shod and on the ground. When Dido was deserted by Aeneas and prepared her funeral pyre she appealed "to the gods and the stars" with her dress and hair loosened, one foot bare and one shod.

Professor Frazer of Cambridge thinks the explanation is to be sought in the belief in the magic virtue of knots, which tied sandals—as they now tie shoes—to the feet; and the learned Roman, Servius, in his commentary on Virgil, says that Dido went with one shoe off and one on in order that Aeneas might be entangled and herself released. But whatever the explanation it was practiced only at times of peril or distress and it is that fact which has brought it down to our own day as a "bad luck" omen.

The Hotel Stenographer

by Roe Fulkerson

"WHO'S the cookie-pusher?" asked the House Detective.

"That's Marie Platt's husband," answered the Hotel Stenographer. "He worried her all one winter to marry him and she did it to get rid of him and it worked perfectly. She rarely ever sees him now. He only comes home to change his clothes and kick about the way the laundry mangles his shirts.

"He is a ham actor who cannot get an engagement on the road and so he goes out as an entertainer at club smokers and things and makes almost twenty bucks a week. With what Marie makes as a manicure they get along right nice from his point of view and punk from here.

"When a man wants anything he is never happy till he gets it and then when he has it he doesn't care anything about it. His whole life is an affirmative argument that there is more pleasure in the pursuit of happiness than in the possession of it. This goes for a polo coat, a wife, a knowledge of the King Tut step in the fox trot or little side whiskers.

"That guy would rather be a ham actor and sing an old song, dance a few steps and get some applause from his friends than have a steady job as a plasterer and make 60 bucks a week.

"Marie has a nice solitaire he bought her on installments, most of which she had to pay, and she is mighty impressive when she tells her customers that her husband is an actor and away most of the time, so she works just to fill in the time. But I never saw her lonely.

"Kelly, the boy I marry has to be such a stuck-up pup that he can barely leave me long enough to go to work. All the dancing he does he's got to do with me, and all the applauding must come from my lily-white hands. I want a husband of my own, not one who belongs to the public."

Play, but No School

The little boy was playing around the schoolyard during school hours. "What's the matter? Why don't you go to school?" asked a passer by.

"Why, you see," and the boy coughed violently, "you see I have the whooping cough and they don't want me in school for fear I'll give it to some other children."

"Well, what are you waiting here for?" persisted the passer by.

"I'm just waiting for 'em to come out at recess time so I can play with 'em a little while," replied the boy, wondering why the passer by exclaimed: "Well, of all things!"—Springfield Union.

Everybody Happy At County Picnic

Then the special police employed by the city became active and drove the crowd far enough back so as to avoid danger both for the crowd and the Troopers.

Present Cup to Troopers.

Before the Troopers gave their exhibition, Captain Fox was presented with a handsome silver cup, the presentation speech being made after the Troopers had assembled by H. M. Eppes of Accord. The cup is inscribed: "To Captain Fox of Troop C, and His Rough Riders, from Ulster County Friends." Captain Fox responded briefly.

The exhibition by the Tropers concluded with the horses jumping through flaming hoops. The Troopers were loudly applauded by the large crowd.

Circus Proves Big Success.

The circus, arranged after much work, was presented in a way that reflected honor on everyone and everything connected with it. It was rather rough on the performers to be compelled to perform part of the time in the rain and on a field which had become so slippery with rain that there were many spills, but but everybody, including the performers, enjoyed it thoroughly. The circus is described in detail elsewhere in The Freeman.

Games Attract Crowd.

The various games and contests were not as complete as they would have been if the weather had been clear, but those which were put on were the center of a great deal of attention and enthusiasm, and are described in detail in another column of The Freeman.

Asbury Wins Pitching Contest.

Marlborough lost the Ulster county championship in the horseshoe pitching contest, the honors being taken by the Asbury team. Marlborough would have kept the cup permanently if her team had won this year. The pitching contest was not started until afternoon because of the non-arrival of some of the players, but it was watched with close interest by a large portion of the picnickers. The scores will be found elsewhere in The Freeman.

Stone Ridge Wins Tug.

The tug-of-war, which is described in another column, was of interest to everybody and everybody enjoyed it except the men who took part. The wet field made it impossible to get a good foothold and most of them went sprawling in the mud before the contest was ended. practically everybody had come prepared for mud, however, and the overalls which they donned before entering the contest will be cleaned easily of Forsyth Park clay and mu by the folks "back home."

Everybody Was Happy.

Everybody who attended the pi nic had a good time and the ra dampened the spirits of but few those present. There were m colored raincoats on display th have been gathered together in o place in Ulster county ever since c ored raincoats came into vog There were more kinds of umbrell displayed than ever before, but the were many umbrellas who rais their protecting covering only wh the rain fell hardest,—the balan of the time they seemed to enj the drizzle.

Appetites Appeased.

The refreshment pavilion, wher operations were conducted by th members of the Ulster County Hom Bureau, with the exception of th hot dog stall, where Assemblyma Millard Davis presided as usual, wa probably the most popular place i the park not only because of th shelter it afforded when the shower were heavy but principally becau the variety of "eats" was larger an the food prepared better than eve before.

There were sandwiches of variou kinds, which disappeared so fa that the women wondered if ther would be enough to last; home mad cakes whose delicacy made mea mouths water simply to look them; home made candy which w the joy of everybody who ate it, an ice cream, fruit, milk, buttermil fruit punch and other delicious re freshments too numerous to men tion.

The picnic was practically at end soon after six o'clock and b seven o'clock the park was desert by all except the Farm and Hom Bureau workers who were bus cleaning up what remained and tea ing down the booths and tents.

Despite unfavorable weather, th people of Ulster county and the ci showed that they heartily approv the Ulster County Picnic.
